Case No. 2:12-bk-15623-RK

Chapter 11

MEMORANDUM DECISION RE DENIAL OF APPROVAL OF THE DEBTORS'
AMENDED DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

DATE: April 25, 2012
TIME: 1:30 p.m.
PLACE: Courtroom 1675
255 E. Temple St.
Los Angeles, CA 90012

On August 24, 2011, Debtors David L. Arnold and Grace E. Arnold filed a Disclosure Statement and a proposed Chapter 11 Plan of Reorganization. A hearing was held on approval of the Disclosure Statement on September 28, 2011. Issues regarding the confirmability of the Plan were raised by creditor U.S. Bank, arguing that the court should not approve the Disclosure Statement because the Plan violated the absolute priority rule. The hearing was continued, and the Debtors filed an Amended Disclosure Statement and proposed Chapter 11 Plan of Reorganization dated and filed on October 14, 2011. On November 16, 2011, the court held a hearing on the Amended Disclosure Statement, where U.S. Bank objected on the same grounds. That hearing was continued

1 to January 18, 2012. Supplemental briefing was filed, and before that hearing, the court 2 vacated the January 18 hearing and took the matter under submission.

3 While the matter was under submission, the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel ("BAP") 4 of the Ninth Circuit, in a divided 2-1 decision, issued an opinion on March 19, 2012 in 5 Friedman v. P+P, LLC (In re Friedman), 466 B.R. 471 (9th Cir. BAP 2012), which held 6 that the absolute priority rule does not apply in Chapter 11 bankruptcy cases of individual 7 debtors after the enactment of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer 8 Protection Act of 2005 ("BAPCPA"), Pub. L. No. 109-8, 119 Stat. 23 (2005). On March 9 20, 2012, the court issued an order inviting further briefing from the parties in light of this 10 recent BAP decision. A final hearing on the Debtors' Disclosure Statement was held on 11 April 25, 2012. The court now enters this memorandum decision.

12 The court finds that the Amended Disclosure Statement does not contain 13 adequate information. The court also concludes that the absolute priority rule applies in 14 this individual Chapter 11 bankruptcy case, and the court finds that the proposed Plan 15 would violate the absolute priority rule. Therefore, the court denies approval of the 16 Amended Disclosure Statement.

17 BACKGROUND

18 The Debtors commenced their bankruptcy case by filing a voluntary Chapter 11 19 petition on March 3, 2011. The Debtors are the co-trustors and co-trustees of the David 20 L. and Grace E. Arnold Trust Dated July 21, 2004 (the "Trust").¹ The Trust is a revocable 21 trust that held title to several investment properties and the Debtors' current residence.
22 Soon after the Debtors' filing, a limited partnership named Full House Enterprises, L.P.
23 ("Full House") also filed a voluntary Chapter 11 petition. Full House has a sophisticated

2 Trust is the limited partner, and the Trust is also B&D's managing member. Stipulated 4 Debtors. Id.

5 Through the Trust, the Debtors had acquired a number of investment properties.
6 The properties were highly leveraged as of the Petition Date:

- 7 1. El Camino Business Center is multi-tenant office complex with 36,366 square feet 8 of rentable space. The Debtors in their Schedules and Amended Disclosure 9 Statement state that this property is valued at $5,434,000. The Debtors also state 10 in these documents that the outstanding amount owing to U.S. Bank on the El 11 Camino Business Center is $4,500,000 (including both the mortgage and the 12 equity line of credit). Based on these figures of the Debtors, the loan-to-value ratio 13 for the El Camino Business Center is approximately 82%. U.S. Bank on its proof 14 of claim filed in this case asserts that as of the Petition Date, the outstanding 15 amount owing to U.S. Bank on a loan secured by the El Camino property is 16 $4,616,074.08. Proof of Claim No. 22-1, filed by U.S. Bank National Association 17 on July 12, 2011. This amount includes the outstanding balance on the mortgage 18 in the amount of $4,422,791.53 (including principal of $3,977,639.43, interest of 19 $395,017.37, and late charges of $50,134.73) as well as the outstanding balance 20 on the equity line of credit in the amount of $193,282.55 (including principal in the 21 amount of $170,550.11, interest in the amount of $20,769.22, and late fees in the 22 amount of $1,963.22). Id. Based on the Debtors' valuation in their Schedules and 23 the outstanding balance figures of U.S. Bank, the loan-to-value ratio for the El 24 Camino Business Center is approximately 85%.
- 25 2. Treehaven Plaza is a multi-tenant office complex with 19,274 square feet of 26 rentable space. The Debtors in their Schedules state that this property is valued 27 at $2,795,000. The Debtors also state in these documents that the outstanding 28 amount owing to U.S. Bank on this property is $2,770,000. Based on these

1 figures provided by the Debtors, the loan-to-value ratio for the Treehaven property
2 is approximately 99%.²

3 3. Yorba Professional and Business Centers are two multi-tenant office buildings with 4 a total of 17,453 square feet of rentable space. The Debtors allege in their 5 Schedules that the value of the Yorba Professional and Business Centers is 6 $2,950,000 and the outstanding amount owing to U.S. Bank is $2,407,975. U.S.
7 Bank contends that as of the Petition Date, the outstanding amount owing to U.S.
8 Bank on Yorba Professional and Business Centers is $2,667,708.76 (including 9 principal of $2,387,661.49, interest of $248,543.10 and late charges of 10 $34,504.17). Motion for Order Approving Stipulation for Relief from Stay (Docket
11 No. 26) at 3. Using the Debtors' outstanding balance amounts, the loan-to-value 12 ratio on the Yorba Professional Business Centers is approximately 82%. Using 13 U.S. Bank's outstanding balance amounts, the loan-to-value ratio on the Yorba 14 Professional and Business Centers is approximately 90%.

15 4. Lido Sands Property is the Debtors' principal residence. The Debtors allege in 16 their Schedules and their Amended Disclosure Statement that the value of the 17 Lido Sands Property is $1,300,000. The Debtors allege in these documents that 18 the outstanding amount owing to U.S. Bank on the Lido Sands Property is 19 $1,200,000. U.S. Bank contends that as of October 24, 2011, the outstanding 20 amount owing to U.S. Bank on the Lido Sands Property is $1,256,313.16 21 (including principal of $1,190,607.77, interest of $22,170.93, and late charges of 22 $43,534.46). Motion for Relief from the Automatic Stay filed by U.S. Bank (Docket
23 No. 122) at 7. Using the Debtors' outstanding balance amounts, the loan-to-value 24 ratio on the Lido Sands Property is approximately 92%. Using U.S. Bank's

26 ² U.S. Bank has alleged that the outstanding balance is $2,758,924.44 (including principal of 27 $2,457,589.47, interest of $268,602.58 and late charges of $32,732.39). Proof of Claim No. 22-1.
28 Using U.S. Bank's outstanding balance amounts, the loan-to value ratio on Treehaven Plaza is approximately 98%.

1 outstanding balance amounts, the loan-to-value ratio on the Lido Sands property is 2 approximately 97%.

3 5. Beacon Bay Property is a land lease from the City of Newport Beach and the 4 Debtor's former residence. The Debtors allege in their Schedules and their 5 Amended Disclosure Statement that the Beacon Bay Property's value is 6 $3,495,000. The Debtors allege in these documents that the outstanding amount 7 owing to Chase Home Finance, LLC ("Chase") on the Beacon Bay Property is 8 $2,150,000 and the amount owing to U.S. Bank is $1,000,000. Therefore, using 9 the Debtors' outstanding balance amounts, the loan-to-value ratio on the Beacon 10 Bay Property is approximately 90%.³

11 U.S. Bank asserts liens on each of the Debtors' above-listed properties. Relief 12 from the automatic stay has been granted as to Treehaven Plaza and the Yorba 13 Professional and Business Centers, and a state court receiver is administering each of 14 these properties.

15 On the Petition Date in this case, Full House held title to three other properties:

16 1. Costa Mesa Property, a commercial office building totaling 26,841 square feet.

17 Full House listed in its Schedules that the value of the Costa Mesa Property is 18 $5,000,000 and the outstanding amount owing on the property was $2,640,000.

19 However, as of January 17, 2011, Full House valued the Costa Mesa Property at 20 $3,261,000. Debtor's Opposition to Motion for Relief from the Automatic Stay 21 (Docket No. 131) at 4.

22 2. Escondido Property consists of two office buildings totaling 28,770 square feet.

23 Full House alleged in its Schedules that the value of the Escondido Property was 24 $5,000,000 and the outstanding amount owing on the property was $3,423,000.

25 ³ Chase contends that the amount owing on the Beacon Bay Property is $2,195,573.00 as of 26 the Petition Date, including $164,778.99 in arrearages. Claim 13-1, filed by Chase Home 27 Finance, LLC on April 12, 2011. U.S. Bank contends that, as of the Petition Date, the outstanding 28 amount owing to U.S. Bank on the Beacon Bay Property is $978,763.10, including $5,989.86 in arrearages. Proof of Claim No. 22-1. Using the banks' outstanding balance amounts, the loan-to-value ratio on the Beacon Bay Property is also approximately 90%.

1 Full House subsequently valued the Escondido Property at $2,225,000 based 2 upon an offer allegedly received from an unrelated third party to purchase the 3 Escondido Property. Debtor's Opposition to Motion for Relief from the Automatic 4 Stay (Docket No. 131) at 5.

- 5 3. Indian Trail Property, a property that includes a 32-room hotel and restaurant, a 6 single family residence and vacant land. Full House alleged in its Schedules that 7 the value of the Indian Trail Property was $5,000,000 and the outstanding amount 8 owing was $2,937,000. This property was sold for $3,150,000 pursuant to 9 § 363(b).

10 Prior to the Petition Date, U.S. Bank made three loans to Full House: a loan on the 11 Costa Mesa Property, a First Loan on the Escondido Property and a Second Loan on the 12 Escondido Property, in the aggregate principal amount of $6,392,500. As stipulated in 13 the Amendment to Stipulation for Order (1) Authorizing Debtor's Use of Cash Collateral; 14 and (2) Adequate Protection to U.S. Bank National Association, filed on January 26, 2010 15 (Docket No. 79), and approved by this court on June 19, 2010 (Docket No. 96), the 16 parties agreed that all pre-petition collateral would secure all of Full House's obligations 17 to U.S. Bank. As of the Petition Date, Full House's obligations to U.S. Bank totaled 18 $6,665,178.67. As such, by January 2011, the outstanding loan balance on the Costa 19 Mesa and Escondido properties was at least $1,179,178 more than their value. Relief 20 from stay was granted on February 16, 2011, to allow U.S. Bank to foreclose (Docket No.
21 135).

22 The Debtors had personally guaranteed Full House's debt obligations to U.S.
23 Bank, which resulted in the bank asserting deficiency claims in the Debtors' bankruptcy 24 case. The Amended Disclosure Statement lists this deficiency claim as the "Disputed 25 U.S. Bank Claim," which is defined as "the general unsecured claim in the amount of 26 $3,023,783.38 asserted by U.S. Bank against the Debtors as alleged guarantors of 27 certain debts of Full House." Amended Disclosure Statement at 13. The Debtors 28 objected to the Disputed U.S. Bank Claim, and by order entered on March 14, 2012, the 1 court overruled the Debtors' objection to this claim. The court's order overruling the 2 objection is now final.

3 The Debtors are in the process of marketing their former residence, and as 4 discussed in their Amended Disclosure Statement, they propose in their Plan to retain 5 their current residence, the Lido Sands Property, and an investment property, the El 6 Camino Business Center. Id. at 29. U.S. Bank objects to the Amended Disclosure 7 Statement on grounds that it lacks adequate information and that it describes a Plan that 8 is patently unconfirmable.

9 DISCUSSION

10 I. Lack of Adequate Information

11 To approve a disclosure statement, the court must determine that it contains 12 "adequate information" as defined by Section 1125 of the Bankruptcy Code:

13 "adequate information" means information of a kind, and in sufficient 14 detail, as far as is reasonably practicable in light of the nature and history 15 of the debtor and the condition of the debtor's books and records, 16 including a discussion of the potential material Federal tax consequences 17 of the plan to the debtor, any successor to the debtor, and a hypothetical 18 investor typical of the holders of claims or interests in the case, that would 19 enable such a hypothetical investor of the relevant class to make an 20 informed judgment about the plan, but adequate information need not 21 include such information about any other possible or proposed plan and 22 in determining whether a disclosure statement provides adequate 23 information, the court shall consider the complexity of the case, the 24 benefit of additional information to creditors and other parties in interest, 25 and the cost of providing additional information

21 11 U.S.C. § 1125(a)(1).

22 The Amended Disclosure Statement and Plan identifies several Options that Class 23 5, which is composed of General Unsecured Creditors, may receive under the Plan.
24 Amended Disclosure Statement at 31-33. The Options are mutually exclusive, and each 25 has a set of conditions under which it applies:

- 26 • Option A: If the Debtors' objection to the Disputed U.S. Bank Claim is 27 sustained in full and if the absolute priority rule does not apply.

- 1 • Option B: If the Debtors' objection to the Disputed U.S. Bank Claim is overruled 2 and if the absolute priority rule does not apply.
- 3 • Option C: If the Debtors' objection to the Disputed U.S. Bank Claim is 4 sustained in full and if the absolute priority rule applies.
- 5 • Option D: If the Debtors' objection to the Disputed U.S. Bank Claim is 6 overruled, if the absolute priority rule applies, and if the New Value Contribution is 7 made.
- 8 • Option E: If the Debtors' objection to the Disputed U.S. Bank Claim is 9 overruled, if the absolute priority rule applies and if the New Value Contribution is 10 not made.

11 Id.

12 Because the court has overruled the Debtors' objection to the Disputed U.S. Bank 13 Claim, Option A and Option C are no longer relevant. Option B is also not relevant 14 because, as discussed below, the absolute priority rule applies in this case. Therefore, in 15 light of the court's rulings on the objection to the Disputed U.S. Bank's Claim and on the 16 applicability of the absolute priority rule, the only relevant two Options are Option D and 17 Option E.

18 Both Options mention the "New Value Contribution," which is stated to apply in 19 some of the Options and not apply in others. The Amended Disclosure Statement 20 defines the "New Value Contribution" as follows:

21 "New Value Contribution" means the sum of money that the Debtors may, at 22 their election, deposit with the Estate on the Effective Date. The New Value 23 Contribution will only be made if (a) the Court determines that the absolute 24 priority rule applies to the Debtors' bankruptcy case, and (b) if the Debtors elect to make the contribution. The amount of the New Value Contribution is $250,000.

25 Amended Disclosure Statement at 15.

26 It is unclear whether the Debtors are proposing to contribute new value and 27 reorganize, under Option D, or whether they are proposing to sell the El Camino Property 28 within 12 months of the Effective Date of the Plan, under Option E. From a disclosure

1 statement, creditors should be able to ascertain whether the Debtors intend to reorganize 2 or liquidate, and it is impossible to discern their intentions based on the Amended 3 Disclosure Statement. Moreover, the Amended Disclosure Statement lacks adequate 4 information for creditors to make an informed judgment about the plan under § 1125(a)(1) 5 because as described in the Amended Disclosure Statement, the Plan sets forth five Plan 6 Options, but it does not state which Plan Option will be operative if the Plan is confirmed 7 and does not provide information on the court's subsequent rulings that affect the viability 8 of the various Options. Therefore, the court finds that the Amended Disclosure 9 Statement does not contain adequate information under § 1125(a).

10 The court also determines that the Amended Disclosure Statement lacks adequate 11 information with respect to the Debtor's discretionary New Value Contribution of 12 $250,000. By its definition in the Amended Disclosure Statement and Plan, the Debtors 13 state that the New Value Contribution will be made "at their election." Amended 14 Disclosure Statement at 15. The Amended Disclosure Statement and Plan do not 15 provide information to substantiate the Debtors' ability to make the New Value 16 Contribution. The Amended Disclosure Statement lists bank accounts holding only 17 $38,000, and miscellaneous personal property worth approximately $45,000, as well as 18 real property assets of unknown value with no information about whether the Debtors 19 have any equity in these real property assets. Id. at 21. There is no information in the 20 Plan or Amended Disclosure Statement to support the possibility of a New Value 21 Contribution and the feasibility of the Plan, and therefore, the Amended Disclosure 22 Statement does not contain adequate information for creditors to make an informed 23 judgment about the plan under § 1125(a).

24 Finally, the Amended Disclosure Statement does not contain adequate information 25 with respect to the total amount owed to General Unsecured Creditors. The Amended 26 Disclosure Statement lists total General Unsecured Claims as $1,128,383.86. Id. at 32, 27 49. The Debtors' objection to the Disputed U.S. Bank Claim, listed in the Amended 28 Disclosure Statement in the amount of $3,023,783.38, was overruled by a now final order

1 of the court. Id. at 13. The Amended Disclosure Statement must be amended to include 2 U.S. Bank's allowed unsecured claim and to reflect an accurate amount owing to General 3 Unsecured Creditors.

4 Thus, for the reasons stated above, the court holds that the Amended Disclosure
5 Statement does not contain adequate information for creditors to make an informed 6 judgment about the plan as defined by § 1125, and approval of the Amended Disclosure 7 Statement must be denied.

8 II. The Plan is Patently Unconfirmable

9 "[W]here a plan is on its face nonconfirmable, as a matter of law, it is appropriate 10 for the court to deny approval of the disclosure statement describing the nonconfirmable 11 plan." In re Silberkraus, 253 B.R. 890, 899 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2000); see also 7 Alan N.
12 Resnick & Henry J. Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy ¶ 1125.03[4] at 1125-23 (16th ed.
13 2011) ("most courts will not approve a disclosure statement if the underlying plan is 14 clearly unconfirmable on its face") (citations omitted). As one court described this 15 obligation in strong terms, "If, on the face of the plan, the plan could not be confirmed, 16 then the Court will not subject the estate to the expense of soliciting votes and seeking 17 confirmation." In re Pecht, 57 B.R. 137, 139 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1986). "Not only would 18 allowing a nonconfirmable plan to accompany a disclosure statement, and be 19 summarized therein, constitute inadequate information, it would be misleading and it 20 would be a needless expense to the estate." Id.

21 Based on the moving and opposing papers, it is evident that Class 5 will reject the 22 Plan, and the Debtors will attempt to cram down pursuant to Section 1129(b) of the 23 Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. As discussed below, because the court concludes that that 24 absolute priority rule applies in this case and that the Plan violates the absolute priority 25 rule, it is therefore appropriate to deny approval of the Amended Disclosure Statement on 26 this basis as well.

A. The Debtors Must Resort to Cramdown

The Amended Disclosure Statement lists total General Unsecured Claims as $1,128,383.86. U.S. Bank's $3,023,783.38 claim, to which the Debtors objected, was not included in this figure as shown by the Amended Disclosure Statement and Plan. As explained above, the court entered an order overruling the Debtors' objection. U.S. Bank, therefore, holds an allowed unsecured deficiency claim, and that amount must be added to the General Unsecured Claims listed by the Debtors. Thus, based on the figures included in the Amended Disclosure Statement, it is clear that U.S. Bank holds more than one-third of the outstanding General Unsecured Claims.

As discussed above, Class 5 is scheduled to receive distributions based on certain Options described in the Plan, and the only relevant Options are Option D and Option E. Under Option D creditors will receive a pro rata share of a promissory note created under the Plan ("Unsecured Creditor Note") with a stated principal amount of $600,000 plus interest at the federal judgment rate, providing for less than 15% of outstanding General Unsecured Claims. Under Option E, the Debtors will "within 12 months of the Effective Date, close escrow on the sale of the [remaining property] and pay 100% of the Net Sale Proceeds to unsecured creditors who hold Allowed Claims."

A claim is impaired unless a plan "leaves unaltered the legal, equitable, and contractual rights to which such claim or interest entitles the holder of such claim or interest." 11 U.S.C. § 1124(1). Under either of the Options listed above, Class 5 is impaired. Therefore, the Debtors must either obtain consent from Class 5 pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(8), or the Debtors must cram down pursuant to § 1129(b).

Class 5 can only consent if creditors "that hold at least two-thirds in amount and more than one-half in number of the allowed claims" vote to accept the Plan. 11 U.S.C. § 1126. Because U.S. Bank holds more than one-third of the allowed claims in Class 5, and because U.S. Bank has voiced its intention to vote against the proposed Plan in the opposing papers, it is clear that Class 5 will reject the proposed Plan. The Debtors must

1 therefore resort to the cramdown provisions of § 1129(b) because there would be a 2 dissenting class of creditors, which does not satisfy the requirement of § 1129(a)(8).

3 B. The Absolute Priority Rule Applies

4 In addressing whether the absolute priority rule applies in Chapter 11 bankruptcy 5 cases of individual debtors after BAPCPA, the courts are sharply divided. The courts 6 that hold that the rule does not apply based on the so-called “broad” view of property of 7 the estate that an individual debtor may retain under a confirmed plan pursuant to 11 8 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) include: In re Tegeder, 369 B.R. 477, 479-481 (Bankr. D. Neb.
9 2007); In re Roedemeier, 374 B.R. 264, 273-276 & nn.15-19 (Bankr. D. Kan. 2007); In re

11 B.R. 316, 320-324 (M.D. Fla. 2011); Friedman v. P+P, LLC (In re Friedman), 466 B.R.
12 471 (9th Cir. BAP 2012); see also In re Johnson, 402 B.R. 851, 852-853 (Bankr. N.D. Ind.
13 2009) (dicta that individual Chapter 11 debtor’s plan need not satisfy the absolute priority 14 rule of 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii)); In re Hockenberry, 457 B.R. 646, 660-661 & n.14 15 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2011) (collecting cases on issue, but not reaching the issue because 16 case decided on other grounds). The courts that hold that the absolute priority rule still 17 applies, adhering to the so-called “narrow” view of property of the estate that an individual 18 debtor may retain in a Chapter 11 plan, include: In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. 222, 227-230

27 (Jury, J., dissenting). The court will discuss several points that it considers most 28 compelling in reaching its decision that the absolute priority rule applies in this case.

1 Before the court begins its analysis of this issue, however, the court will address the 2 impact of the recent decision in Friedman issued by the Ninth Circuit BAP.

3 i. Friedman is Not Binding

4 In this circuit, orders of the bankruptcy courts may be appealed to either the 5 federal district court or the BAP. 28 U.S.C. § 158(a), (b)(1), (c)(1); see also Bank of Maui
6 v. Estate Analysis, Inc., 904 F.2d 470, 471 (9th Cir. 1990). The authoritative effect of a 7 BAP decision remains an open question in this circuit. Bank of Maui, 904 F.2d at 472;
8 see also Zimmer v. PSB Lending Corp. (In re Zimmer), 313 F.3d 1220, 1225-1226 (9th 9 Cir. 2002). In Bank of Maui, the Ninth Circuit expressly declined to reach the issue, but it 10 held that the binding effect of a BAP decision was so uncertain that it cannot be the basis 11 for sanctioning a party under Rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.
12 Bank of Maui, 904 F.2d at 471. The Ninth Circuit also concluded that a decision of the 13 BAP as an Article I court is not binding on the federal district courts that must be free to 14 formulate their own rules within their jurisdiction. Id. In a concurring opinion in Bank of 15 Maui, Judge O'Scannlain observed that the BAP was established by the Judicial Council 16 of the Ninth Circuit pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 158 and that the order of the Judicial Council 17 provided that the BAP may hear and determine appeals from all districts within the circuit
18 that have authorized the use of the BAP pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 158(b)(2). Id. at 472
19 (O'Scannlain, J., concurring). Judge O'Scannlain further noted that the Judicial Council 20 order outlined the BAP's powers and functions, but it did not describe the binding effect of 21 a BAP decision. Id. Judge O'Scannlain commented that the Judicial Council should 22 amend its order to provide that BAP decisions were binding on the bankruptcy courts in 23 the circuit. Id.

24 As recently observed by the court in In re Grant, 423 B.R. 320 (Bankr. S.D. Cal.
25 2010), the Judicial Council of the Ninth Circuit has not amended the BAP authorization 26 order to provide that BAP decisions are binding on the bankruptcy courts within the circuit
27 as Judge O'Scannlain suggested. In re Grant, 423 B.R. at 321, citing In re Zimmer, 313 28 F.3d 1220 at 1225-1226 (9th Cir. 2002). In Zimmer, a panel of the Ninth Circuit stated in dicta that the binding nature of BAP decision was “an open question in this circuit” and joined Judge O’Scannlain’s call in Bank of Maui that the Judicial Council clarify whether the bankruptcy courts must follow the BAP. In re Zimmer, 313 F.3d at 1225.

The bankruptcy courts of the circuit are divided as to whether BAP decisions are binding on them, and even within this judicial district, the bankruptcy courts are divided on the issue. Compare In re Windmill Farms, Inc., 70 B.R. 618 (9th Cir. BAP 1987), rev’d on other grounds, 841 F.2d 1467 (9th Cir. 1988) (BAP decisions are binding on bankruptcy courts in the circuit), Life Insurance Co. of Virginia v. Barakat (In re Barakat), 173 B.R. 672 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1994) (same), Coyne v. Westinghouse Credit Corp. (In re Globe Illumination Co.), 149 B.R. 614 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1993) (same) with Rinard v. Positive Investments, Inc. (In re Rinard), 451 B.R. 12 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2011) (BAP decisions not binding), Crain v. PSB Lending Corp. (In re Crain), 243 B.R. 75 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1999) (same); see also Daniel J. Bussel, Power, Authority and Precedent in Interpreting the Bankruptcy Code, 41 UCLA L. Rev. 1064 (1994).

Some bankruptcy courts, including the BAP itself, conclude that BAP decisions are binding on the bankruptcy courts of the circuit. See, e.g., In re Windmill Farms, Inc., 70 B.R. at 621; In re Barakat, 173 B.R. at 676-678; In re Globe Illumination Co., 149 B.R. at 617-622. In Windmill Farms, the BAP stated that “the BAP was [designed] to provide a uniform and consistent body of bankruptcy law throughout the entire Circuit” and its decisions must be binding “[i]n order to achieve this desired uniformity.” In re Windmill Farms, 70 B.R. at 622. As concluded by the courts in Barakat and Globe Illumination, BAP decisions should be binding on the bankruptcy courts in the circuit under the principles of stare decisis. In re Barakat, 173 B.R. at 676 (recognizing the “need to have a starting point from which legal analysis could begin and a way to avoid the repeated litigation of identical issues in different cases”); In re Globe Illumination Co., 149 B.R. at 617 (“Courts are bound by the decisions of law by higher courts under the principle of stare decisis.”)

1 Citing Bank of Maui, other bankruptcy courts conclude that BAP decisions do not 2 carry the weight of stare decisis and thus, are not binding on them. See, e.g., In re
3 Rinard, 451 B.R. at 20 (“The decisions of the BAP are binding only on the judges whose 4 orders have been reversed or remanded by the BAP in that particular dispute. In all other 5 instances, the decisions of the BAP are effective only to the extent they are persuasive.”);
6 In re Crain, 243 B.R. at 81 & n.6. In Crain, the court observed, “The bankruptcy courts 7 that have concluded that BAP decisions are not binding do so because the doctrine of 8 stare decisis is a judge created doctrine meant to function within a single track appellate 9 system, where decisions are binding on courts on the same level or below.” 243 B.R. at 10 81 n.6. “The problem is that bankruptcy judges operate in a dual track system where 11 decisions by BAP judges are not binding on district court judges and decisions by district 12 court judges are not binding on BAP judges.” Id. “An additional complexity is that the 13 decision of one district court judge is not binding on his or her colleague.” Id., citing 14 Gasperini v. Center for Humanities, Inc., 518 U.S. 415 (1996).

15 If an appeal is taken of this court’s decision, which does not follow the BAP’s 16 holding in Friedman, to the BAP, most likely the BAP would reverse this court’s decision 17 in accordance with its policy stated in Windmill Farms that its decisions are binding on the 18 bankruptcy courts of the circuit. However, if an appeal is taken and a party alternatively 19 elects to have the district court hear the appeal, the BAP’s decision in Friedman would 20 not be binding on the district court under Bank of Maui. This situation presents a 21 quandary for the court. In exercising its duty of independent inquiry to examine the law, 22 the court could decide to be bound by BAP decisions under the principle of stare decisis, 23 but then again, other bankruptcy courts not only in the circuit, but in this judicial district, 24 have come to a different conclusion, equally principled, in exercising this same duty of 25 independent judicial inquiry in the absence of definitive authority that BAP precedent is
28

1 binding on them.⁴ Accordingly, in the absence of definitive guidance on the binding effect 2 of BAP decisions from the Judicial Council of the Ninth Circuit in an amended order on 3 BAP authority or by the Ninth Circuit itself in a precedential opinion, or other higher 4 authority (i.e., the Supreme Court or Congress), and in light of the lack of uniformity in 5 opinion on this issue among the bankruptcy courts in the circuit, the court adopts the 6 analysis in Crain and will thus consider, but will not be bound by, the decision of the BAP
7 in Friedman on the issue of whether the absolute priority rule applies in Chapter 11 8 bankruptcy cases of individual debtors. See In re Crain, 243 B.R. at 81 & n.6.

9 As discussed below, the court concludes that the “broad” interpretation of § 1115 10 espoused by the majority BAP opinion in Friedman is not persuasive. One reason is the 11 significant statement at the beginning of the opinion that “[n]o party has participated as an 12 appellee in this appeal,” or in other words, the BAP reached its decision in Friedman 13 without the benefit of briefing from both sides. In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 473.
14 Furthermore, the court does not agree with the BAP in Friedman that the broad 15 interpretation of § 1115 is dictated by a plain reading of the statutory language. The court 16 concludes that the language of § 1115 is ambiguous and that the broad interpretation is 17 strained and ultimately unpersuasive. The court also concludes that the broad 19 ⁴ In a law review article on the writing of judicial opinions, specifically on writing separately, 20 Judge (now Justice) Ruth Bader Ginsburg wrote: “Disclosure of votes and opinion writers may 21 nourish a judge’s ego, his or her sense of individuality; but if our system affords the judge 22 personal satisfaction, it also serves to hold the individual judge accountable. The process of 23 writing signed opinions is a testing venture. California’s once Chief Justice Roger Traynor wrote 24 of the process: ‘I have not found a better test for the solution of a case than its articulation in 25 writing, which is thinking at its hardest. A judge . . . often discovers that his tentative views will 26 not jell in the writing. He wrestles with the devil more than once to set forth a sound opinion that 27 will be sufficient unto more than the day.’ The prospect of a dissent or separate concurring 28 statement pointing out an opinion’s inaccuracies and inadequacies strengthens the best; it heightens the opinion writer’s incentive to ‘get it right.’” Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Remarks on Writing Separately, 65 Wash. L. Rev. 133, 139 (1990), quoting Roger J. Traynor, Some Open Questions on the Work of State Appellate Courts, 24 U. Chi. L. Rev. 211, 218 (1957). This opinion is this court’s effort to “get it right.” While this court may be critical of the opinions of other courts, hopefully in an appropriate tone and manner, in pointing out what it perceives to be inaccuracies and inadequacies, this court respects and admires the sincere efforts of those other courts to “get it right” and to be as transparent and accountable as possible in articulating in writing the reasons for their decisions.

1 interpretation is not supported by the weight of the case law as an emerging majority of 2 the courts deciding the issue have opted for the “narrow” interpretation of § 1115. In re 3 Lively, __B.R. ___, 2012 WL 959286, at *2 (Bankr. S.D. Tex., Memorandum Opinion in 4 Support of Certification for Direct Appeal, filed on Mar. 21, 2012) (collecting cases).
5 Finally, the court finds that the legislative history and strong policy considerations require 6 a narrow reading of § 1115.

7 ii. The Absolute Priority Rule

8 Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C., is the reorganization chapter of the 9 Code and sets forth a statutory system for reorganizing businesses in the United States.
10 11 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.; see also Elizabeth Warren, Chapter 11: Reorganizing 11 American Businesses at 1-21 (2008); Elizabeth Warren & Jay Westbrook, Success of 12 Chapter 11: A Challenge to the Critics, 107 Mich. L. Rev. 603 (2009); Douglas G. Baird, 13 The Elements of Bankruptcy at 4-33, 66-86, 225-282 (4th ed. 2006). Technically 14 speaking, reorganization refers to a change in the debt obligations of the business, but in 15 essence, it is a process that is “about how to spread around pain for a business that 16 cannot repay its debts in full.” Warren, Chapter 11: Reorganizing American Businesses 17 at 4. In describing the purpose of Chapter 11, the Supreme Court has observed:

18 In proceedings under the reorganization provisions of the Bankruptcy 19 Code, a troubled enterprise may be restructured to enable it to operate 20 successfully in the future. . . . By permitting reorganization, Congress 21 anticipated that the business would continue to provide jobs, to satisfy creditors’ claims, and to produce a return for its owners. . . . Congress presumed that the assets of the debtor would be more valuable if used in a rehabilitated business than if “sold for scrap.”

26 reorganizing and restructuring its debts and the creditors’ interest in maximizing the value 27 of the bankruptcy estate.” Florida Department of Revenue v. Piccadilly Cafeterias, Inc., 28 554 U.S. 33, 51(2008), citing Toibb v. Radloff, 501 U.S. 157, 163 (1991). This balance

5 Most Chapter 11 cases are filed by entities, not individuals, but individual persons 6 may file a Chapter 11 case. Warren, Chapter 11: Reorganizing American Businesses at 7 4. (“About 90 percent of the Chapter 11 filers are legal fictions, mostly corporations, with 8 a few LLCs and partnerships thrown in.”) (footnote omitted); see also Toibb v. Radloff, 9 501 U.S. at 160-161 (recognizing that individual debtors may file Chapter 11); John D.
10 Ayer & Michael L. Bernstein, Bankruptcy in Practice 96 (4th ed. 2007). In explaining why 11 historically there have not been so many individual Chapter 11 cases, Ayer and Bernstein 12 comment:

13 There has never been any great rush on the part of individuals to get into 14 chapter 11. For the most part, the individual cases in chapter 11 are 15 limited to those with complex personal investments. In the late 1980s and early 1990s, there were a fair number of real estate developer cases.
We may see that again during the next real estate cycle.

16 Ayer & Bernstein, Bankruptcy in Practice at 96.

17 “The front door to Chapter 11 is wide—there are few restrictions to filing. But the 18 back door is narrow—only about a third of all businesses that file for Chapter 11 manage 19 to emerge with a confirmed plan of reorganization.” Warren, Chapter 11: Reorganizing 20 American Businesses at 133. The heart of the Chapter 11 process is creditor consent.
21 Elizabeth Warren & Jay Westbrook, The Law of Debtors and Creditors 677 (6th ed.
22 2009). “A Chapter 11 petition is an invitation to a negotiation [between the debtor and the 23 creditors].” Id. at 397. “The law and practice of Chapter 11 establishes a framework for 24 negotiations.” Baird, The Elements of Bankruptcy at 86. “For the businesses that make 25 it to the plan-confirmation process, the overwhelming majority of those that confirm a plan 26 do so with the consent of their creditors.” Warren, Chapter 11: Reorganizing American 27 Businesses at 133. “If all the creditors consent, there are few restrictions on the shape 28 that the plan may take.” Id. “The Code provides for confirmation over the objections of 1 the creditors in limited circumstances; however, few debtors actually litigate and 2 successfully confirm a plan over the vigorous opposition of their creditors.” Id. at 133-3 134. Thus, “[t]he provisions for plan confirmation are central to the Chapter 11 process.”

4 Id. at 134. “Confirmation is the final settlement of the rights of the parties.” Id.

5 In order for a plan to be confirmed consensually under 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a), it 6 must meet sixteen requirements set forth in § 1129(a)(1) through (16), including the 7 voting requirements of § 1129(a)(8). 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(1)-(16); see also Bonner Mall
8 Partnership v. U.S. Bancorp Mortgage Co. (In re Bonner Mall Partnership), 2 F.3d 899, 9 905 (9th Cir. 1993). The voting requirements of § 1129(a)(8) mandate that “[w]ith respect 10 to each class of claims or interests---(A) such class has accepted the plan; or (B) such 11 class is not impaired under the plan.” 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(8); In re Bonner Mall 12 Partnership, 2 F.3d at 905. “A class is deemed to have accepted a plan if at least two-13 thirds in amount and more than one-half in number of claims in the class vote to accept 14 it.” In re Bonner Mall Partnership, 2 F.3d at 905 n.17; 11 U.S.C. § 1126(c). “A class is 15 impaired if the plan does not provide it with full payment in cash of its claims on the date 16 the plan becomes effective.” In re Bonner Mall Partnership, 2 F.3d at 905 n.17; 11 17 U.S.C. § 1124(3)(A).

18 The Bankruptcy Code, however, “provides that where all requirements for 19 confirmation but section 1129(a)(8) are met, the bankruptcy court shall confirm a Chapter 20 11 reorganization plan over the objection of an impaired class or classes ‘if the plan does 21 not discriminate unfairly, and is fair and equitable, with respect to each class of claims or 22 interests that is impaired under, and has not accepted, the plan.’” In re Bonner Mall 23 Partnership, 2 F.3d at 906, citing 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(1)(emphasis in original). “This 24 form of confirmation is commonly known in bankruptcy parlance as a ‘cramdown’ 25 because the plan is crammed down the throats of the objecting class(es) of creditors.” Id.
26 Whether a cramdown plan is “fair and equitable” depends on whether it meets the 27 absolute priority test of § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii). Everett v. Perez (In re Perez), 30 F.3d 1209,

1 1214 (9th Cir. 1994) (pre-BAPCPA case); In re Bonner Mall Partnership, 2 F.3d at 906 2 (same).

3 In describing the Chapter 11 cramdown plan, Professor Warren commented:

4 The cramdown plan . . . incorporates all of the requirements of the 5 consensual plan—and all its normative values—except that the plan can 6 be confirmed even if some classes vote against it. By permitting 7 confirmation without the consent of all classes, the Code necessarily 8 realigns the power of participants in the bankruptcy process. Cramdowns 9 diminish the power of creditors, particularly their power to hold out for better treatment than the minimum amounts guaranteed elsewhere in the Code. The availability of the cramdown option also increases the number of bankrupt businesses that are reorganized rather than liquidated, demonstrating once again a preference in the Code for reorganization.

10 Warren, Chapter 11: Reorganizing American Businesses at 168. As further observed by 11 Professor Warren, the absolute priority rule is an important limitation on cramdown plans:

12 The absolute priority rule restricts the DIP's [debtor-in-possession's] use 13 of the cramdown by requiring that equity holders retain no ownership in 14 the reorganizing business unless superior classes either have accepted 15 the plan or received payment in full. This fine-tunes the balance of power 16 among the parties. If the DIP wants to confirm a plan that includes 17 retaining equity ownership, it will either have to pay the creditors in full or 18 negotiate for their cooperation. If, however, the DIP wants to sell the business and distribute the assets to creditors, a dissenting class cannot block that action unless some other Code requirement has been violated.
Thus, the power of creditors if they choose to dissent is restricted; they can block some actions but not others. The balance achieved is one that is designed to enhance reorganization, but to provide some creditor protection as well.

19 Id.; see also Elizabeth Warren, A Theory of Absolute Priority, 1991 Annual Survey of 20 American Law 9 (1991).

21 In discussing cramdown and the absolute priority rule, Professors Warren and 22 Westbrook emphasize the importance of creditor consent:

23 There is a tendency . . . to focus on cramdown in Chapter 11 because it is 24 a legal rule, and to ignore the negotiation that leads to creditor 25 acceptance of a plan because it is a messy, idiosyncratic process. Yet 26 negotiated consent is the essence of the Chapter 11 scheme The 27 exclusive right to propose a plan and the possibility of cramdown 28 represent the leverage that the debtor brings to the negotiating table, but agreement is the larger theme. Chapter 11 is descended from both of the reorganization chapters, Chapters X and XI, under the old Act, but more from the latter than the former. Consent was the essence of Chapter XI
. . . while absolute priority was the central focus of Chapter X When they were combined into Chapter 11, the absolute priority rule was 1 modified to permit equity participation if creditor consent was obtained.

2 Thus consent remains the heart of Chapter 11.

3 Warren & Westbrook, The Law of Debtors and Creditors at 669.

4 The absolute priority rule “provides that a dissenting class of unsecured creditors 5 must be provided for in full before any junior class can receive or retain any property 6 [under a reorganization] plan.” Norwest Bank Worthington v. Ahlers, 485 U.S. 197, 202 7 (1988) (citation omitted). In Ahlers, the Supreme Court summarized the history and 8 development of the absolute priority rule:

9 The rule had its genesis in judicial construction of the undefined 10 requirement of the early bankruptcy statute that reorganization plans be 11 “fair and equitable.” See Northern Pacific R. Co. v. Boyd, 228 U.S. 482, 12 504-505, 33 S.Ct. 554, 560, 57 L.Ed. 931 (1913); Louisville Trust Co. v.
13 Louisville, N.A. & C.R. Co., 174 U.S. 674, 684, 19 S.Ct. 827, 830, 43 14 L.Ed. 1130 (1899). The rule has since gained express statutory force, and was incorporated into Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code adopted in 1978. See 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) (1982 ed., Supp. IV). Under current law, no Chapter 11 reorganization plan can be confirmed over the creditors’ legitimate objections (absent certain conditions not relevant here) if it fails to comply with the absolute priority rule.

15 485 U.S. at 202; see also In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 509-510 (“The absolute priority rule 16 has been a mainstay of Chapter 11 and predecessor practice since at least the 1930s. If 17 the railroad reorganization cases are also considered, the absolute priority rule or 18 something very like it has been acknowledged as far back as at least the 1890s.”)
19 (citations omitted); Kenneth N. Klee, Bankruptcy and the Supreme Court 366-397 (2008) 20 (detailed discussion of Supreme Court precedent on absolute priority rule and its 21 antecedents since Railroad Co. v. Howard, 74 (7 Wall.) 392 (1869)).

22 The absolute priority rule is codified at 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) and prohibits 23 “the bankruptcy court from approving a plan that gives the holder of a claim anything at 24 all unless all objecting classes senior to him have been paid in full.” In re Perez, 30 F.3d 25 at 1214. Specifically, § 1129(b) in its current form allows debtors to confirm a plan over 26 the objection of unsecured creditors so long as the unsecured class is given “fair and 27 equitable” treatment under the plan through one of the two options under 28 § 1129(b)(2)(B)(i) or (ii):

(b)(1) Notwithstanding section 510(a) of this title, if all of the applicable requirements of subsection (a) of this section other than paragraph (8) are met with respect to a plan, the court, on request of the proponent of the plan, shall confirm the plan notwithstanding the requirements of such paragraph if the plan does not discriminate unfairly, and is fair and equitable, with respect to each class of claims that is impaired under, and has not accepted, the plan.

(2) For the purpose of this subsection, the condition that a plan be fair and equitable with respect to a class includes the following requirements:

(B) With respect to a class of unsecured claims---

(i) the plan provides that each holder of a claim of such class receive or retain on account of such claim property of a value, as of the effective date of the plan, equal to the allowed amount of such claim; or

(ii) the holder of any claim or interest that is junior to the claims of such class will not receive or retain under the plan on account of such junior claim or interest any property, except that in a case in which the debtor is an individual, the debtor may retain property included in the estate under section 1115, subject to the requirements of subsection (a)(14) of this section.

11 U.S.C. § 1129(b). “In other words, a plan may not give ‘property’ to the holders of any junior claims or interests ‘on account of’ those claims or interests, unless all classes of senior claims either receive full value of their claims or give their consent.” In re DBSD North America, Inc., 634 F.3d 79, 88 (2d Cir. 2011), quoted in In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 892.

In Bank of America National Trust & Savings Assn. v. 203 North LaSalle Street Partnership, the Supreme Court described the rationale for the absolute priority rule:

The Bankruptcy Act preceding the Code contained no such provision as subsection (b)(2)(B)(ii), its subject having been addressed by two interpretive rules. The first was a specific gloss on the requirement of § 77B (and its successor, Chapter X) of the old Act, that any reorganization plan be “fair and equitable.” 11 U.S.C. § 205(e) (1934 ed., Supp. I) (repealed 1938) (§ 77B); 11 U.S.C. § 621(2) (1934 ed., Supp. IV) (repealed 1979) (Chapter X). The reason for such a limitation was the danger inherent in any reorganization plan proposed by a debtor, then and now, that the plan will simply turn out to be too good a deal for the debtor's owners. See H.R. Doc. No. 93–137, pt. I, p. 255 (1973) (discussing concern with “the ability of a few insiders, whether representatives of management or major creditors, to use the

1 reorganization process to gain an unfair advantage”); ibid. (“[I]t was 2 believed that creditors, because of management's position of dominance, 3 were not able to bargain effectively without a clear standard of fairness
4 and judicial control”); Ayer, Rethinking Absolute Priority After Ahlers, 87 5 Mich. L.Rev. 963, 969–973 (1989). Hence the pre-Code judicial response 6 known as the absolute priority rule, that fairness and equity required that 7 “the creditors . . . be paid before the stockholders could retain [equity 8 interests] for any purpose whatever.” Northern Pacific R. Co. v. Boyd, 228 interest in the property is subordinate to the rights of creditors; first of secured and then of unsecured creditors,” and concluding that “any arrangement of the parties by which the subordinate rights and interests of the stockholders are attempted to be secured at the expense of the prior rights of either class of creditors comes within judicial denunciation”).

10 526 U.S. at 444. As this statement recounts, the absolute priority rule was judicially 11 created before its legislative enactment in the Bankruptcy Code of 1978. Id.; see also 12 John D. Ayer, Rethinking Absolute Priority after Ahlers, 87 Mich. L. Rev. 963 (1989) 13 (recounting the history and development of the absolute priority rule). The reason for the 14 absolute priority rule as recognized by Congress and observed by the Supreme Court in 15 203 North LaSalle Street Partnership was “the danger inherent in any reorganization plan 16 proposed by a debtor, then and now, that the plan will simply turn out to be too good a 17 deal for the debtor's owners.” 526 U.S. at 444-445, citing H.R. Doc. No. 93-137, pt. I, 18 p.255 (1973); see also In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 892. In her article entitled A Theory of 19 Absolute Priority, Professor Warren elaborated on this concern:

20 The legal rule of absolute priority had its genesis in the long-standing 21 common law maxim that creditors would be paid ahead of equity. This 22 rule assured those who did business with the corporation that if the 23 business were dissolved the creditors would be paid before the insiders would recover their investments. In case of collapse, the creditors could count on payment in full before equity collected anything from the business assets.

24 The provision is a form of creditor protection, one of many that attempt to 25 restrict the ability of corporate owners and insiders from depleting a failing 26 business for their own benefit, leaving the creditors with only the empty 27 shell of a business. In part, the rule is designed to offset some of the 28 consequences of superior information and control necessarily available to equity owners when they manage the business or exercise close supervision over the nominal managers. The rules of absolute priority satisfy concerns similar to those of state law rules of dividend distribution, for example, which require that the corporation only distribute stock

1 dividends from earned surplus rather than from the general assets of the 2 business. As any good law-and-economics devotee could point out, 3 creditors could have insisted on such provisions in advance, but the law 4 provides an off-the-rack ordering among the parties that is nearest to what the parties would likely have negotiated for themselves, requiring that the owners/insiders restrict their abilities to take assets from the business to the injury of the creditors.

5 Warren, A Theory of Absolute Priority at 37-38.

6 As described by Professor Baird, the centrality of the absolute priority rule drives 7 the Chapter 11 process:

8 The ambition of every lawyer whose client files a Chapter 11 petition is to 9 persuade each group of creditors to consent to a plan of reorganization.
10 Whether a group consents depends on its rights under the plan versus 11 the rights it would have if it refused to go along with the plan. The 12 absolute priority rule is central to the law of corporate reorganizations 13 because it is the source of substantive rights as well as the procedural 14 protections that each participant in a reorganization enjoys. Parties can 15 insist that the priority rights they enjoyed outside of bankruptcy be 16 respected inside. Nevertheless, every junior party, including the shareholders, can invoke elaborate procedures before their rights are compromised. The absolute priority rule allows the senior parties to insist on full payment, but it also grants all junior parties those procedural protections necessary for a “just reorganization.” Resolving this tension between substantive and procedural rights that began with [Northern Pacific R. Co. v. Boyd].174 U.S. 482 (1913)] remains central to answering the hard questions that arise under Chapter 11.

17 Baird, The Elements of Bankruptcy at 86.

18 Thus, the court considers the hard question of whether Congress in enacting 19 BAPCPA abrogated the absolute priority for Chapter 11 bankruptcy cases of individual 20 debtors in adding new § 1115 to, and amending § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) of, the Bankruptcy 21 Code, 11 U.S.C.

22 iii. Reconciliation of § 1129(b)(2)(B) and § 1115

23 The absolute priority rule was amended by BAPCPA to provide for an exception in 24 the Chapter 11 case of an individual debtor. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii). Specifically, 25 Section 321(c) of BAPCPA added the following statutory language, which so amended 26 the absolute priority rule: “except that in a case in which the debtor is an individual, the 27 debtor may retain property included in the estate under section 1115, subject to the requirements of subsection (a)(14) of this section.”⁵ Id. The critical question of statutory interpretation is what does the phrase “property included in the estate under section 1115” mean, which allows an individual debtor to retain certain property in a confirmed Chapter 11 reorganization plan as an exception to the absolute priority rule. In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 891-892. In order to answer this question, § 1115, added by BAPCPA, must be examined, and this statutory provision states:

(a) In a case in which the debtor is an individual, property of the estate includes, in addition to the property specified in section 541—

(1) all property of the kind specified in section 541 that the debtor acquires after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13, whichever occurs first; and

(2) earnings from services performed by the debtor after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13, whichever occurs first.

11 U.S.C. § 1115(a).

How the court interprets amended § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) and new § 1115(a) will ultimately affect the balance of power between the parties in this Chapter 11 bankruptcy case of individual debtors. “The Bankruptcy Code establishes a rough allocation of power among the parties in interest in a bankruptcy case, and the courts refine that allocation with their interpretation of the statutory provisions.” Warren, Chapter 11: Reorganizing American Businesses at 168-169. The specific problem is whether § 1115 should be construed broadly or narrowly in order to determine what property an individual debtor may retain under a confirmed Chapter 11 plan (i.e., “property included in the estate under section 1115”) pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii). In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 891-893. One court has succinctly framed the precise issue as follows:

⁵ 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(14) states: “If the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order, or by statute, to pay a domestic support obligation, the debtor has paid all amounts payable under such order or such statute for such obligation that first become payable after the date of the filing of the petition.

1 This new provision [i.e., Section 1115] both refers to the property already 2 brought into the bankruptcy estate by § 541 and brings more property into 3 the estate. Unfortunately, the exception and § 1115(a) are worded in 4 such a way that the exception could be construed narrowly to cover only 5 the additional, post-petition property brought into the Chapter 11 6 bankruptcy case by § 1115(a), or broadly to cover not only that property 7 but also all of the property brought into the estate by § 541, most of which 8 is property the debtor had before filing for bankruptcy. The first 9 construction would greatly limit the impact of the new exception under 10 § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii), but the second would exempt an individual Chapter 11 11 debtor from the main facet of the absolute priority rule, allowing him or 12 her to retain both pre- and postpetition property under a plan even though 13 a class of unsecured creditors would not be paid in full. The Court must 14 determine which interpretation matches Congress's intent in making 15 these changes.

16 In re Roedemeier, 374 B.R. at 274; see also In re Karlovich, 456 B.R. at 680-681.

17 The courts have disagreed on whether the meaning of the operative language of 18 § 1115 is plain or ambiguous. Some courts have held that the plain language of the 19 statute supports the broad view. See In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 482; SPCP Group, LLC
20 v. Biggins, 465 B.R. at 320-323; In re Tegeder, 369 B.R. at 480. Some courts have held 21 that the plain meaning rule supports the narrow view. See In re Karlovich, 456 B.R. at 22 681; In re Lively, ___ B.R. ___, 2012 WL 959286, at *6. Some courts have found that the 23 language of the statute is ambiguous and have held that statutory interpretation favors 24 the broad view. See In re Shat, 424 B.R. at 867. Other courts finding the statutory 25 language ambiguous have determined that statutory analysis supports the narrow view.

28 The court begins its analysis with the language of the statute. United States v.
Ron Pair Enterprises, Inc., 489 U.S. 235, 241 (1989) ("The task of resolving the dispute over the meaning of [a statute] begins where all such inquiries must begin: with the language of the statute itself.") (citation omitted). "[W]here . . . the statute's language is plain, the sole function of the courts is to enforce it according to its terms." Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). "[C]ourts must presume that a legislature says in a statute what it means and means in a statute what it says there." Connecticut National Bank v. Germain, 503 U.S. 249, 253-254 (1992), quoted in In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 893

(citations and internal quotation marks omitted). “When the words of a statute are unambiguous, then, this first canon is also the last: judicial inquiry is complete.” Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). “Courts are to scrutinize the statute as a whole and ‘not look merely to a particular clause in which general words may be used, but . . . in connection with the whole statute . . . and the objects and policy of the law, as indicated by its various provisions, and give to it such a construction as will carry into execution the will of the Legislature.’” In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 893, quoting Azarte v. Ashcroft, 394 F.3d 1278, 1288 (9th Cir. 2005), quoting Kokoszka v. Belford, 417 U.S. 642, 650 (1974) (citation omitted). The Supreme Court in Ron Pair also stated that “as long as the statutory scheme is coherent and consistent, there generally is no need for a court to inquire beyond the plain language of the statute.” 489 U.S. at 240-241. “[T]he plain language is regarded as conclusive, unless (1) the statutory language is unclear, (2) the plain meaning of the words is at variance with the policy of the statute as a whole, or (3) a clearly expressed legislative intent exists contrary to the language of the statute.” Columbia Pictures Industries, Inc. v. Professional Real Estate Investors, Inc., 866 F.2d 278, 280 n.4 (9th Cir. 1989), citing inter alia, Richards v. United States, 369 U.S. 1, 11 (1962).

Furthermore, the Supreme Court has stated that “[i]t is ‘a cardinal principle of statutory construction’ that ‘a statute ought, upon the whole, to be so construed that, if it can be prevented, no clause, sentence, or word shall be superfluous, void, or insignificant.’” TRW Inc. v. Andrews, 534 U.S. 19, 31 (2001) (citation omitted); accord, In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 487 (Jury, J., dissenting), citing inter alia, Connecticut National Bank v. Germain, 503 U.S. at 253 (“[C]ourts should disfavor interpretations of statutes that render language superfluous”). It is also “[a] fundamental canon of statutory construction . . . that, unless otherwise defined, words will be interpreted as taking their ordinary, contemporary, common meaning.” In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 893, quoting Perrin v. United States, 444 U.S. 37, 42 (1979).

1 The court in Roedemeier precisely identified the interpretative problem raised by 2 the statutes here: “Unfortunately, the exception and § 1115(a) are worded in such a way 3 that the exception could be construed narrowly to cover only the additional, post-petition 4 property brought into the Chapter 11 bankruptcy estate by § 1115(a), or broadly to cover 5 not only that property but also all the property brought into the estate by § 541, most of 6 which is property the debtor had before filing for bankruptcy.” In re Roedemeier, 374 7 B.R. at 274. Thus, the court agrees with the court in Lindsey, which concluded that “it is 8 axiomatic that the language of § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) and § 1115 is ambiguous, otherwise 9 there would be no split of authority and the arguments in favor of each position so 10 diverse.” In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 903.

11 The exception to the absolute priority rule added by Section 321(c) of BAPCPA 12 excepts from the rule in the case of an individual Chapter 11 debtor, “property included in 13 the estate under section 1115,” which the debtor may retain in a confirmed plan under the 14 cramdown standards of § 1129(b). 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii). Thus, the exception 15 refers to § 1115, which provides in pertinent part:

16 (a) In a case in which the debtor is an individual, property of the estate
17 includes, in addition to the property specified in section 541—

18 (1) all property of the kind specified in section 541 that the debtor
19 acquires after the commencement of the case but before the case 20 is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 21 13, whichever occurs first; and

22 (2) earnings from services performed by the debtor after the 23 commencement of the case but before the case is closed, 24 dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13, 25 whichever occurs first.

26 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a).

27 Prior cases have focused on analyzing the word “includes” in § 1115(a) and the 28 word “included” in the phrase, “property of the estate included under section 1115” in the exception to the absolute priority rule under § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) to determine what property of the bankruptcy estate an individual debtor may retain in Chapter 11. In re Shat, 424

3 Definitions of the words, “includes” and “included,” are set forth in the American 4 Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, as follows:

5 Include tr.v. –cluded, -cluding, -cludes 1. To take in as a part, element, 6 or member. 2. To contain as a secondary or subordinate element. 3. To consider with or place into a group, class or total

7 American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language at 887 (4th ed. 2000).

8 For the reasons set forth in this memorandum decision, the structure of the 9 sentence in § 1115(a) containing the word “includes” presents a question of grammar 10 which needs to be analyzed and understood. “To be a sentence, a group of words must 11 [h]ave a subject (noun or pronoun), [h]ave a predicate (verb or verb phrase) [and 12 e]xpress a complete thought.” Laurie Rozakis, English Grammar for the Utterly Confused 13 at 116 (2003) (italics in original).⁶ “A sentence has two parts: a subject and a predicate.
14 The subject includes the noun or pronoun that tells what the subject is about.” Id. (italics 15 in original). “The predicate includes the verb that describes what the subject is doing.”
16 Id. (italics in original).

17 In order to understand a subject and a predicate, parts of speech, i.e., noun or 18 pronoun, and verb, must be defined: “A noun is a word that names a person, place, or 19 thing. . . . A pronoun is a word used in place of a noun or another pronoun. . . . Verbs 20 name an action or describes a state of being.” Id. at 8-9, 12. (italics in original). One 21 type of verb is an action verb, which “tell[s] what the subject does.” Id. at 12. “An action 22 verb can be transitive or transitive. Transitive verbs need a direct object. . . . Intransitive 23 verbs do not need a direct object.” Id. (italics in original). “A direct object is a noun or 24 pronoun that receives the action.” Id. at 21.

1 In interpreting § 1115(a), the court determines that it is necessary to analyze it 2 from a grammatical perspective as a sentence, which reads as follows:

3 In a case in which the debtor is an individual, property of the estate
4 includes, in addition to the property specified in section 541—

5 (1) all property of the kind specified in section 541 that the debtor
6 acquires after the commencement of the case but before the case
7 is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or

10 commencement of the case but before the case is closed, 11 dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13, 12 whichever occurs first.

13 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a).

14 The subject of the sentence, or the noun or pronoun that tells what the subject is 15 about, is “property of the estate.” Rozakis, English Grammar for the Utterly Confused at 16 116. “Property of the estate” is not a single-word noun; it is a collective noun, which is a 17 noun that “name[s] groups of people or things,” and which in this case is a group of 18 assets constituting assets of the bankruptcy estate. 11 U.S.C. §§ 541 and 1115; see 19 also, Rozakis, English Grammar for the Utterly Confused at 8. The predicate of the 20 sentence includes the verb that describes what the subject is doing, which happens to be 21 the transitive verb, “includes.” 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a); American Heritage Dictionary of the 22 English Language at 887 (definition of “include” lists it as “tr. v.,” or transitive verb).

23 As stated previously, transitive verbs require a direct object or direct objects, and 24 a direct object is a noun or pronoun that receives the action. The direct objects of the 25 sentence, or the nouns that receive the action of the transitive verb, “includes,” are:

26 (1) all property of the kind specified in section 541 that the debtor acquires 27 after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, 28 dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13, whichever occurs first (i.e., all post petition property acquired by the debtor); and

(2) earnings from services performed by the debtor after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13, whichever occurs first (i.e., all earnings from the debtor’s postpetition services).

1 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a)(1) and (2). All postpetition property of the debtor and all earnings
2 from the debtor's position services are collective nouns. Thus, as to these two categories 3 of assets, the sentence expresses a complete thought: The "property of the estate" 4 (subject) "includes" (transitive verb) all postpetition property of the debtor (direct 5 object/collective noun) and all earnings from the debtor's postpetition services (direct 6 object/collective noun). 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a)(1) and (2). The predicate of the sentence 7 consists of the transitive verb, "includes," and the direct objects, "all postpetition property 8 of the debtor" and "all earnings from the debtor's postpetition services." Based on its 9 review of the case law, the court concludes that the courts adopting the broad view of 10 § 1115(a) and those adopting the narrow view would agree with the complete thought of 11 this statutory sentence that these assets are "included" as "property of the estate 12 included under section 1115" for purposes of the exception to the absolute priority rule for 13 individual Chapter 11 debtors under § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii). 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a)(1) and (2), 14 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii); see In re Shat, 424 B.R. at 863; In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229; In re 15 Friedman, 466 B.R. at 481 (majority opinion), 466 B.R. at 487-488 (Jury, J., dissenting).

16 Section 1115(a) refers to a third category of assets called "the property specified in 17 section 541," which raises the issue in the dispute in this case as to the broad versus 18 narrow view of the statute. There should be no dispute that "the property specified in 19 section 541" is a collective noun. However, the court notes differences in placement of 20 this collective noun in the statutory sentence. First, it is not separately enumerated like 21 (1) and (2) for the other categories of assets. Second, it is attached to the phrase, "in 22 addition to."

23 Because the original meaning of "includes" is "[t]o take in as a part, element or 24 member," separate enumeration of the items "included" helps to identify what parts, 25 elements or members are included. That appears to be the reason why Congress 26 separately enumerated: (1) all postpetition property of the debtor; and (2) all earnings 27 from the debtor's postpetition services in § 1115(a).

1 The third category of assets, “the property specified in section 541,” is treated 2 differently in § 1115(a) is prefaced and modified by the phrase, “in addition to,” which 3 indicates that it is “besides,” or “separate from,” the subject of the sentence, i.e., “property 4 of the estate.” “The ordinary meaning of ‘in addition to’ is ‘a part added’ or ‘besides.’” In 5 re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 488 (Jury, J., dissenting), citing Merriam–Webster’s Dictionary, 6 <http://merriam-webster.com> and Oxford English Dictionary, <http://oxforddictionaries.com> 7 (“the action or process of adding something to something else”); see also Cohen v.
8 United States, 121 F.2d 1007, 1008 (5th Cir. 1941) (“‘In addition’ means that an 9 additional but separate grace or privilege is to be extended.”). The American Heritage
10 Dictionary of the English Language defines “in addition to” in a similar manner, i.e., “Over 11 and above, besides.” The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language at 20 12 (listed under definition of “addition”). The phrase, “the property specified in section 541,” 13 is not a direct object, or a noun or pronoun that receives the action of the transitive verb, 14 “includes” because another phrase, “in addition to,” gets in the way and cannot be 15 ignored. “A phrase is a group of words that functions in a sentence as a single part of 16 speech.” Rozakis, English Grammar for the Utterly Confused at 102. “A phrase does not 17 have a subject or a verb, so it cannot stand alone as an independent unit---it can function 18 only as a part of speech.” Id. Professor Rozakis further states on phrases: “As you 19 write, you use phrases to add detail by describing. Phrases help you express yourself 20 more clearly.” Id.

21 The phrase, “in addition to,” is part of a prepositional phrase because it begins with 22 a preposition, “in.” Rozakis, English Grammar for the Utterly Confused at 9, 102-103.
23 “Prepositions link a noun or a pronoun following it to another word in the sentence.” Id. at 24 9. The object of the prepositional phrase is “the property specified in section 541.” Id. at 25 102. “A prepositional phrase is a group of words that begins with a preposition and ends 26 with a noun or pronoun. This noun or pronoun is called the ‘object of the preposition.’” 27 Id. (italics in original). Thus, the entire prepositional phrase, which is relevant in 28 interpreting the meaning of § 1115(a), is “in addition to the property specified in section 541.” 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a). Since prepositions link a noun or pronoun to another word in a sentence, the question before the court is this: to what word is the noun, “the property specified in section 541” linked in § 1115(a), i.e., “property of the estate,” another noun, which reflects the broad view; or is it linked to “includes,” a verb, which reflects the narrow view. 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a).

In technical grammatical terms, the specific question is whether “in addition to property specified in section 541” is an “adjectival phrase” or an “adverbial phrase.” Rozakis, English Grammar for the Utterly Confused at 102-103. An “adjectival phrase” is defined as follows:

When a prepositional phrase serves as an adjective, it’s called an adjectival phrase. An adjectival phrase, as with an adjective, describes a noun or pronoun. To find out if a prepositional phrase is functioning as an adjectival phrase, see if it answers these questions: “Which one?” or “What kind?”

Id. at 102 (italics in original). An “adverbial phrase” is defined as follows:

When a prepositional phrase serves as an adverb, it’s called an adverbial phrase. In these cases, it describes a verb, an adjective, or adverb. To find out if a prepositional phrase is functioning as an adverbial phrase, see if it answers one of these questions: “Where?” “When?” “In what manner?” “To what extent?”

Id. at 103 (italics in original).

Applying this analysis, the prepositional phrase, “in addition to the property specified in section 541” is an adverbial phrase because it modifies the verb, “includes,” to explain to what extent “property of the estate” is included under § 1115(a), i.e., postpetition property and services under § 1115(a)(1) and (2). The prepositional phrase, “in addition to the property specified in section 541,” is not an adjectival phrase because it does not describe a noun (i.e., “property of the estate”) as it does not answer the questions, “Which one?” or “What kind?” To reach that result, the words, “in addition to” must be ignored, which would not be the express language of the statute. TRW Inc. v. Andrews, 534 U.S. at 33. In sum, this means that “in addition to the property specified in section 541” is an adverbial prepositional phrase linked to the verb, “includes,” because it modifies the word, “includes,” in answering the question “to what extent is property

1 included as property of the estate under § 1115(a).” As part of the prepositional phrase, 2 “in addition to the property specified in section 541,” the phrase, “the property specified in 3 section 541” cannot be viewed in isolation. The phrase is part of the prepositional phrase 4 beginning with “in addition to,” and is thus not the direct object of the transitive verb, 5 “includes,” so it does not relate to the subject of the sentence, “property of the estate.”
6 In other words, from a functional standpoint, the phrase, “the property specified in section 7 541,” is not an answer to the question what is included as “property of the estate” under 8 § 1115. Accordingly, the court concludes that based on the grammatical structure of 9 § 1115, “the property specified in section 541” is not “property included in the estate 10 under section 1115,” which may be retained by an individual Chapter 11 debtor pursuant 11 to the exception to the absolute priority rule in § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii). Although a 12 grammatical analysis of the words, phrases and sentences in § 1115(a) is technical and 13 somewhat formalistic, it is a helpful aid in interpreting the statutory language of § 1115(a) 14 as recognized by a canon of statutory construction that “[w]ords are to be interpreted 15 according to the proper grammatical effect of their arrangement within the statute.” 2A 16 Norman J. Singer & J.D. Shambie Singer, Statutes and Statutory Construction, § 48A.8 17 at 768-769 & n.37 (7th ed. 2007 and 2011-2012 Supp.) (citations omitted); see also 18 Resolution Trust Corporation v. Love, 36 F.3d 972, 976 (10th Cir. 1994) (“A statute must 19 be construed as ‘mandated by the grammatical structure.’”), quoting United States v. Ron 20 Pair Enterprises, Inc., 489 U.S. at 241. As discussed in this section of the memorandum 21 decision, a grammatical analysis of the statutory language of § 1115 supports a narrow 22 interpretation of the statute, but as otherwise discussed in other sections of this 23 memorandum decision, the grammatical analysis is in addition to other methods of 24 statutory construction that also show the narrow view is correct.

25 Another point of grammar is that “[p]hrases or clauses introduced by such 26 expressions as together with, as well as, in addition to are not part of the subject and, 27 therefore, do not affect the number of the verb.” Margaret Shertzer, The Elements of 28 Grammar at 23 (1986) (italics in original); see also William Strunk & E.B. White, Elements

1 of Style at 10 (3d ed. 1979). This grammatical point reinforces the idea that “in addition 2 to” means that the matter is “besides” or “separate from” the subject of the sentence, 3 which in § 1115(a) means “property of the estate” included under § 1115. See 11 U.S.C.
4 § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii).

5 The courts favoring the broad view of § 1115, e.g., Friedman and Shat, adopt that 6 view based on the premise that § 1115 subsumes and supplants § 541 in individual 7 Chapter 11 cases. In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 478-484; In re Shat, 424 B.R. at 865
8 (“Section 1115 absorbs and then supersedes Section 541 for individual Chapter 11 9 cases.”). As stated in Friedman,

10 We believe that § 1115 plainly identifies an individual Chapter 11 debtor's 11 estate as

12 (1) Property specified in § 541 (i.e., “property of the estate includes, 13 in addition to the property specified in section 541”) (emphasis 14 added);

15 (2) All property of the kind specified in § 541 that the (individual) 16 debtor acquires after the commencement (but before the closure, 17 dismissal or conversion) of the case; and

(3) [E]arnings from services performed by the debtor after the commencement of the case but before the case is closed, dismissed, or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13,
whichever occurs first.

18 In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 481. The problem this court has with this manner of 19 “identification” is that it reinterprets § 1115(a) by unduly ignoring or diminishing (1) the 20 effect of key phrase, “in addition to,” and (2) the effect of § 541 by subsuming and 21 supplanting it into § 1115(a). If Congress had intended for § 1115 to subsume or 22 supplant § 541, it could have added § 541 to the enumerated items on the list in 23 § 1115(a). Instead, § 1115(a) adds only two items: (1) all postpetition property of an 24 individual debtor and (2) earnings from postpetition services performed by the debtor.
25 Thus, as discussed in this memorandum decision, the court agrees with the courts 26 adopting the narrow view that § 1115 does not subsume or supplant § 541. In re Kamell, 27 451 B.R. at 512, In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904; In re Karlovich, 456 B.R. at 681; In re 28 Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 230; In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 492 (Jury, J., dissenting).

1 Section 541 is the provision of the Bankruptcy Code that defines and creates the 2 bankruptcy estate, and it applies to all chapters of the Code, including Chapter 11:

3 (a) The commencement of a case under section 301, 302, or 303 of this 4 title creates an estate. Such estate is comprised of all the following property, wherever located and by whomever held:

5 (1) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c)(2) of this section, 6 all legal or equitable interests of the debtor in property as of the commencement of the case. . . .

7 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(1).⁷ “Section 103(a) provides that § 541 applies in a chapter 11 8 case, including an individual chapter 11 case.” In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229.

9 Section 541 not only creates the bankruptcy estate in a case under the Bankruptcy 10 Code, but it also defines what the estate is comprised of, which definition is very broad, 11 i.e., all prepetition legal or equitable interests of the debtor. In describing the critical 12 importance of § 541, Collier on Bankruptcy states:

13 Section 541 embodies the essence of the Bankruptcy Code. It creates 14 the bankruptcy estate, which consists of all of the property that will be 15 subject to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court. Property belonging to 16 the estate is protected from piecemeal dismantling by creditors by the 17 automatic stay of section 362. It is this central aggregation of property 18 that promotes the fundamental purposes of the Bankruptcy Code: the breathing room given to a debtor that attempts to make a fresh start, and the equality of distribution of assets among similarly situated creditors, according to the priorities set forth within the Code. It is from this central core of estate property that the debtor's creditors will be paid.

19 In order to achieve these goals, it is necessary and desirable that the 20 property included in the bankruptcy estate be as inclusive as possible.
21 Congress's intent to define property of the estate in the broadest possible 22 sense is evident from the language of the statute, which initially defines 23 the scope of estate property to be all legal or equitable interests of the debtor in property as of the commencement of the case, wherever located and by whomever held. It would be hard to imagine language that would be more encompassing. Yet the remainder of section 541(a)

25 ⁷ Sections 301, 302 and 303 of the Bankruptcy Code provide respectively that a voluntary 26 case under a chapter of the Code, a joint bankruptcy case under a chapter of the Code, and an 27 involuntary bankruptcy case under Chapter 7 or 11 of the Code are commenced with the filing of 28 a bankruptcy petition. 11 U.S.C. §§ 301-303. These references are generally applicable and inclusive of Chapter 11. 11 U.S.C. § 103; see also, In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229; In re Stephens, 445 B.R. at 820-821; In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 488-489 (Jury, J., dissenting).

1 attempts to do just that. . . . Thus, section 541(a) defines everything that 2 is included in property of the estate.

3 5 Resnick & Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy ¶ 541.01 at 541-10; see also Baird, The 4 Elements of Bankruptcy at 16 (“Section 541 defines the central concept of the property of 5 the estate.”) (italics in original).

6 By its very language, § 1115 does not create the bankruptcy estate of an individual 7 Chapter 11 debtor. 11 U.S.C. § 1115. That is accomplished by § 541(a) for individual 8 debtor Chapter 11 cases as well as other cases under the Bankruptcy Code. 11 U.S.C.

10 Friedman, 466 B.R. at 488-489 (Jury, J., dissenting). Thus, § 1115 by its very language 11 does not supplant or replace § 541(a) in creating the bankruptcy estate in a Chapter 11 12 case of an individual debtor and in defining most of the property of the bankruptcy estate 13 in such a case (i.e., all prepetition legal or equitable interests of the debtor). Id.; also 14 compare 11 U.S.C. § 541(a) with 11 U.S.C. § 1115(a). In this regard, the court disagrees 15 with the statement in Shat that “Section 1115 creates a baseline estate of all the property 16 covered by Section 541.” In re Shat, 424 B.R. at 863. As discussed herein, § 541 does 17 that itself as expressed in the plain language of that provision because it, not § 1115, 18 creates an estate and defines property of the estate for all cases under the Bankruptcy 19 Code, including Chapter 11 cases, both for individual and entity debtors. 11 U.S.C.
20 § 541(a); see also 11 U.S.C. § 103(a) (provisions of Chapter 5, including, § 541(a) apply 23 (stating that since neither § 103(a) nor § 541 was amended by BAPCPA, “there is no 24 reason for § 1115 to ‘absorb’ and ‘supersede’ § 541 to define property of the estate for 25 individual chapter 11 cases”). Moreover, the word “creates” is noticeably absent in 26 § 1115. 11 U.S.C. § 1115. The “baseline” estate of an individual Chapter 11 debtor 27 consisting of the all prepetition legal or equitable interests of the debtor is created by 28 § 541(a), which is consistent with the language and general purpose of that statutory

1 provision. 11 U.S.C. § 541(a); 5 Resnick & Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy ¶ 541.01 at 2 541-10; In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229-230.

3 The court agrees with Stephens, which recognized the phrase “all property of the 4 kind specified in section 541” as part of the preamble of § 1115(a) in adopting the narrow 5 view of the statute. 445 B.R. at 820-821. As discussed previously, the bankruptcy estate
6 of an individual debtor in a Chapter 11 case is created under § 541(a), which specifies 7 that the estate consists of all prepetition legal and equitable interests of the debtor. 11 8 U.S.C. § 541(a). Thus, these property interests are already part of the bankruptcy estate 9 by virtue of § 541(a). The first part of § 1115(a) referring to § 541 property looks and acts 10 like a preamble because by using the words “in addition to,” it sets a context for the 11 addition of two different items not covered by § 541(a) to the bankruptcy estate of an 12 individual debtor in Chapter 11, namely, postpetition assets and postpetition earnings.

13 The statutory language and numbering of § 1115(a) show that these two additional 14 items are “in addition to the property specified in section 541.” § 1115 (emphasis added).
15 “Accordingly . . . §§ 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) and 1115 are most naturally understood to add to 16 the property already defined in § 541 the property which the debtor acquires postpetition.”
17 In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 488 (Jury, J., dissenting). Before and after BAPCPA, all 18 prepetition legal and equitable interests of the debtor are property of the bankruptcy 19 estate under § 541(a). Section 1115(a) simply adds two new kinds of property to the 20 bankruptcy estate that were created and defined by § 541(a). See In re Kamell, 451 B.R.
21 at 512, In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904; In re Karlovich, 456 B.R. at 681; In re Gbadebo, 22 431 B.R. at 230. “Section 1115(a) brings into the estate a debtor’s postpetition property 23 expressly excluded by § 541.” In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 488 (Jury, J., dissenting), 24 citing, 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(6) (carving out postpetition earnings from services performed 25 by an individual debtor after the commencement of the case) and § 541(a)(7) (making 26 property of the estate any interest in property that the estate (not the debtor) acquires 27 after the case).

1 Section 1115(a) is not the exclusive definition of property of the estate of an 2 individual Chapter 11 debtor because the statutory language is not structured that way.
3 Both statutes define property of the bankruptcy estate, and both statutes have the 4 heading, "Property of the estate." 11 U.S.C. §§ 541 and 1115. Section 1115 does not 5 define property of the estate of an individual Chapter 11 debtor exclusively as shown by 6 use of the word, "includes," which is not a word of limitation. The reference to § 541 is a 7 preamble in nature to state the context for adding the two additional items of property to 8 the estate. In re Stephens, 445 B.R. at 820-821; accord, In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 899.
9 If § 1115(a) were to be considered the exclusive definition of property of the estate for an 10 individual Chapter 11 debtor, the categories of property would have simply enumerated 11 (1), (2) and (3) and specifically described as categories of property of the estate or the 12 statute would have only stated the verb, "includes," without the prepositional phrase, "in

14 Use of the phrase "in addition to the property specified in section 541" in § 1115 15 clarifies that property of the estate is also created by § 541 because there might be an 16 ambiguity if such phrase is omitted. That is, without such phrase, since § 1115 17 specifically states that it applies "in a case in which the debtor is an individual" and it 18 describes only two types of assets, it might have been erroneously construed that those 19 were the only two types of assets in the Chapter 11 bankruptcy estate of an individual.
20 The specification of § 541 in the phrase, "in addition to the property specified in section 21 541," in § 1115(a) ensures that parties are aware that other property is considered 22 property of the estate through another provision of the Bankruptcy Code.

23 As stated previously, "It is 'a cardinal principle of statutory construction' that 'a 24 statute ought, upon the whole, to be so construed that, if it can be prevented, no clause, 25 sentence, or word shall be superfluous, void, or insignificant.'" TRW Inc. v. Andrews, 534 26 U.S. at 31 (citation omitted). If the court were to adopt the Debtors' suggested 27 interpretation of § 1115 based on the broad view, it would render § 541 entirely 28 superfluous in individual Chapter 11 cases without any clear indication from Congress

1 that such a result was intended. As discussed herein, the Debtors' interpretation also 2 fails to give effect to the words of § 1115(a), "in addition to." Thus, in this court's view, 3 the property of an individual debtor in a Chapter 11 bankruptcy case consists of:
4 (1) § 541 property, i.e., all prepetition legal and equitable interests of the debtor; 5 (2) § 1115(a)(1) property, i.e., all postpetition legal and equitable interests of the debtor;
6 and (3) § 1115(a)(2) property, i.e., postpetition earnings of the debtor.⁸

7 Thus, reading §§ 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) and 1115 together in light of the grammatical 8 structure of the statutory language, and giving effect to the meaning of each word or 9 phrase of these statutes, makes it clear that the absolute priority rule is applicable in 10 individual Chapter 11 debtor cases, and it limits the Debtors' retention of property in a 11 cramdown to the two classes of property specifically enumerated in § 1115(a)(1) and (2).

12 iv. Legislative History

13 As discussed below in this and subsequent sections of this memorandum 14 decision, the court's analysis of the impact of the BAPCPA amendments in §§ 1115 and 15 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) on the absolute priority rule affecting individual Chapter 11 debtors 16 includes, in addition to the analysis specified in the preceding section based on an 17 examination of the language and grammar of these statutes---(1) a review of the 18 legislative history of BAPCPA; (2) policy considerations regarding the abrogation of the 19 absolute priority rule on Chapter 11 theory and practice; and (3) an assessment of the 20 weight of the case law.

21 The Supreme Court has given guidance in reconciling various sections within the 22 Bankruptcy Code in light of the BAPCPA amendments. For example, with respect to 23 BAPCPA Chapter 13 amendments, the Supreme Court has stated that it "will not read the 24 ⁸ The court takes no position as to whether the absolute priority rule applies to property 25 claimed as exempt since this issue was not raised, nor briefed, by the parties. Given the court's 26 ruling on the absolute priority rule as to property of the estate in general, the court need not 27 address the issue. See In re Bullard, 358 B.R. 541, 545 (Bankr. D. Conn. 2007); 7 Resnick & 28 Sommer, Collier on Bankruptcy, ¶ 1129.04[4][a] at 1129-137; Alan M. Ahart, The Absolute Abolition of the Absolute Priority Rule in Individual Chapter 11 Cases, 31 Cal. Bankr. J. 731, 737-741 (2011).

2 Congress intended such a departure.” Hamilton v. Lanning, 130 S.Ct. 2464, 2473 (2010)
3 (internal quotations omitted); see also Klee, Bankruptcy and the Supreme Court at 24-25 4 & n.89 (collecting cases for this proposition).

5 With respect to the relevant legislative history of §§ 1115 and 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) as 6 added by BAPCPA, some courts have found it to be “scarce, equivocal and altogether 7 unhelpful.” In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 509. On Section 321 of BAPCPA, which adds 8 § 1115(a) and amends § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii), the House Judiciary Committee report stated:

9 Section 321(a) of the Act creates a new provision under chapter 11 of the 10 Bankruptcy Code specifying that property of the estate of an individual 11 debtor includes, in addition to that identified in section 541 of the 12 Bankruptcy Code, all property of the kind described in section 541 that 13 the debtor acquires after commencement of the case, but before the case 14 is closed, dismissed or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 13 15 (whichever occurs first). In addition, it includes earnings from services 16 performed by the debtor after commencement of the case, but before the 17 case is closed, dismissed or converted to a case under chapter 7, 12, or 18 13. Except as provided in section 1104 of the Bankruptcy Code or the 19 order confirming a chapter 11 plan, section 321(a) provides that the 20 debtor remains in possession of all property of the estate.

22 Section 321(c) also amends section 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) of the Bankruptcy 23 Code to provide that an individual debtor may retain property included in 24 the estate under section 1115 (as added by the Act), subject to section 25 1129(a)(14).

26 H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, pt. 1 at 80 (2005). Thus, the legislative history specifically 27 referencing the addition of § 1115 and the amendment of § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) in BAPCPA 28 as reflected in the House committee report is unhelpful because it simply restates the statutory language. Id.; see also, In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 509.

What legislative history does exist, however, actually reinforces the idea that “the purpose behind BAPCPA was to have debtors pay more, not less.” In re Friedman, 466
B.R. at 490 (Jury, J., dissenting), citing In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 508; see also In re
Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904-905; In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229. As reflected in the House Judiciary Committee Report for BAPCPA, the primary purpose of BAPCPA is “to improve

1 bankruptcy law and practice by restoring personal responsibility and integrity in the 2 bankruptcy system and ensure that the system is fair for both debtors and creditors.”
3 H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, part 1 at 2 (2005), 2005 WL 832198, at *2, quoted in In re Lindsey, 4 453 B.R. at 904.

5 Moreover, as the House Report stated, Congress cited four general factors for 6 enacting BAPCPA. H.R. Rep. No. 109-3(I), part 1 at 3-5 (2005), 2005 WL 832198, at *2-7 3, cited in In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904-905. First, Congress noted “the recent 8 escalation of consumer bankruptcy filings,” which had resulted in the “growing perception 9 that bankruptcy relief may be too readily available and is sometimes used as a first 10 resort, rather than a last resort.” H.R. Rep. No. 109-31(I), part 1 at 3-4. Second, 11 Congress referenced the “significant losses asserted to be associated with bankruptcy 12 filings,” which are said to be passed on to “responsible Americans who live up to their 13 financial obligations.” Id. at 4. Those losses may come in the form of “higher down 14 payments, higher interest rates, and higher costs for goods and services.” Id. at 4. Third, 15 Congress stated that “the present bankruptcy system has loopholes and incentives that 16 allow and—sometimes—even encourage opportunistic personal filings and abuse.” Id. at 17 5. Fourth, Congress stated that “some bankruptcy debtors are able to repay a significant 18 portion of their debts, according to several studies. Current law, however, has no clear 19 mandate requiring these debtors to repay their debts.” Id. This legislative history of 20 BAPCPA has led a number of courts to adopt the narrow view of § 1115 because the 21 overall purpose of BACPA was to “ensure that debtors who can pay back a portion of 22 their debts do so.” In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229; see also In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 23 508; In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904-905.

24 At least one court favoring the broad view of § 1115 apparently suggests that 25 Congress abrogated the absolute priority rule for individual debtors in Chapter 11 to 26 further an individual debtor’s fresh start. In re Shat, 424 B.R. at 866-867, citing inter alia 27 Marrama v. Citizens Bank of Massachusetts, 549 U.S. 365, 367 (2007) and Grogan v.
28 Garner, 498 U.S. 279, 286 (1991); see also, Andrew G. Balbus, Does the Absolute

1 Priority Rule Apply to Individuals in Chapter 11?, Norton J. Bankr. L. & Pract. 1 Art. 4 2 (2011) ("Perhaps the most important policy objective in Chapter 11 is to provide a debtor 3 with a fresh start.") (footnote omitted); but see, Bank of America National Trust & Savings
4 Assn. v. 203 North LaSalle Street Partnership, 526 U.S. at 453 (listing "the two 5 recognized policies underlying Chapter 11, of preserving going concerns and maximizing 6 property available to satisfy creditors"). However, as the court in Gbadebo observed, "No 7 one who reads BAPCPA as a whole can reasonably conclude that it was designed to 8 enhance the individual debtor's 'fresh start.'" In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229. "Each one 9 of these new provisions [of BAPCPA to make individual Chapter 11 cases to look more 10 like Chapter 13 cases] appears designed to impose greater burdens on individual chapter 11 11 debtor's rights so as to ensure a greater payout to creditors." Id. "This was a 12 frequently expressed overall purpose of BAPCPA, i.e., to ensure that debtors who can 13 pay back a portion of their debts do so." Id. These new provisions included defining an 14 individual debtor's postpetition income as property of the estate under § 1115 and 15 requiring such income to be committed to pay creditors under the plan under § 16 1129(a)(15). 11 U.S.C. §1115 and 1129(a)(15). The legislative history of BAPCPA (i.e., 17 the House Report, H.R. Rep. No. 109-31(I)) does not support the suggestion that 18 Congress wanted to enhance an individual debtor's fresh start. H.R. Rep. No. 109-31(I), 19 part 1 at 2-5 (2005), 2005 WL 832198, at *2-3, cited in In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904.
20 Thus, in other words, based on this legislative history, it is incongruous to conclude that 21 Congress intended to relax plan confirmation standards for individual Chapter 11 debtors 22 by removing the creditor protection of the absolute priority rule and thereby allowing 23 these debtors to retain their prepetition assets and cram down unsecured creditors. In re
24 Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229; see also In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 508-512; In re Lindsey, 453
25 B.R. at 904-905.

26 The court also notes that Section 321 of BAPCPA, which added § 1115 to the 27 Bankruptcy Code, including the statutory language at issue in this case, was enacted as 28 part of Title III of BAPCPA and is entitled Discouraging Bankruptcy Abuse. Pub. L. No.

1 109-8, 119 Stat. 23 (2005); Florida Department of Revenue v. Piccadilly Cafeterias, Inc., 2 554 U.S. at 47 (“statutory titles and section headings are tools available for the resolution 3 of a doubt about the meaning of a statute”) (citation and internal quotation marks
4 omitted); 2A Singer & Singer, Statutes and Statutory Construction, § 47.3 at 289-290 & 5 nn.15-16 (title of a statutory act may be some indicia of legislative intent). The broad 6 view of § 1115, which eliminates the creditor protection of the absolute priority rule for 7 individual Chapter 11 debtors, is an ironic reading of BAPCPA in light of the general 8 purposes of BAPCPA and new § 1115 being part of a title of the Act to discourage 9 bankruptcy abuse.

10 Given that there is no indication in the legislative history that Congress intended to 11 abrogate the absolute priority rule as to individual Chapter 11 debtors as to all of their 12 prepetition property, and given that the general purposes of BAPCPA cited by Congress 13 were to curb perceived abuses by debtors, it is incorrect to read §§ 1129 and 1115 in 14 such a way as to fully abrogate the absolute priority rule for individual Chapter 11 15 debtors. In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229-230; In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 507-511; In re
16 Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904-905; In re Karlovich, 456 B.R. at 681-682; In re Friedman, 466

18 v. Policy Considerations

19 Finally, strong policy considerations require the application of the absolute priority 20 rule to individual Chapter 11 cases. As explained in Kamell, 21 After BAPCPA, the debtor facing opposition of any one unsecured 22 creditor must devote 5 years worth of “projected disposable income,” at a 23 minimum (or longer if the plan is longer). But debtor is not compelled to 24 give also his additional earnings or after-acquired property net of living 25 expenses beyond five years unless the plan is proposed for a period longer than five years. But there is no compelling reason to also conclude that prepetition property need not be pledged under the plan as the price for cram down, just as it has always been. This does unnecessary violence to well-established jurisprudence.

26 In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 511; see also Northern Pacific R. Co. v. Boyd, 228 U.S. at 508; 27 Louisville Trust Co. v. Louisville, N.A. & C.R. Co., 174 U.S. at 684; Norwest Bank
28 Worthington v. Ahlers, 485 U.S. at 202; Bank of America National Trust & Savings Assn.

1 v. 203 North LaSalle Street Partnership, 526 U.S. at 444-445; In re Perez, 30 F.3d at 2 1214; Warren, A Theory of Absolute Priority at 37-38; Baird, The Elements of Bankruptcy
3 at 86.

4 If Congress had not amended § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) to soften the impact of the 5 absolute priority rule on individual Chapter 11 debtors, individual debtors would be unable 6 to retain any postpetition earnings or property now included in the estate under 7 § 1115(a)(1) and (2) in a cramdown plan unless they were able to negotiate an 8 agreement with their creditors or pay the claims of the dissenting creditors in full. See In 9 re Perez, 30 F.3d at 1212-1231. “Obviously, forfeiting all post-petition income would have 10 been at least difficult if not impossible in almost all individual cases. So, the ‘absolute 11 priority rule’ had to be amended to let the debtor keep enough of his post petition 12 earnings to sustain his livelihood.” In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 511. Thus, with the creation 13 of § 1115 and the exclusion of postpetition property from § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii), Congress 14 struck a careful balance between the rights of an individual debtor to cram down and the 15 rights of creditors to be given fair and equitable treatment.

16 The narrow reading of § 1115 respects this fine-tuned balance. The broad view 17 does not because it essentially abrogates the absolute priority rule for an individual 18 Chapter 11 debtor as to all of the debtor’s prepetition assets, which disrupts, if not 19 destroys, the fine-tuned balance between the rights of a Chapter 11 debtor and the 20 creditors without support in the structure or statutory language of the Bankruptcy Code, 21 and §§ 541 and 1115 in particular. See Florida Department of Revenue v. Piccadilly 22 Cafeterias, Inc., 554 U.S. at 51, citing Toibb v. Radloff, 501 U.S. at 163. This result is 23 accomplished by a change in the fundamental dynamic of Chapter 11 of creditor consent 24 and negotiation for individual debtor cases under the broad view because it assumes 25 cramdown in plan confirmation by allowing the debtor to retain prepetition property 26 without having to comply with the absolute priority rule. There is no need for an individual 27 debtor-in-possession to negotiate with creditors to seek their consent and solicit their 28 votes for a reorganization plan if the debtor knows in advance that he or she can resort to

1 cramdown and keep his or her prepetition property regardless of any vote in a plan
2 confirmation process. In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 230 (“Finally, if §§ 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii)
3 and 1115 are read to eliminate the ‘absolute priority’ rule for individual chapter 11 4 debtors, the Court is faced with a procedural anomaly. If the plan proposes to pay them 5 anything, the debtor is required to send them a ballot. Yet, their vote can be ignored.
6 This makes no sense.”); contra, In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 483-484.⁹ In effect, the 7 broad view removes the creditor protection of the absolute priority rule, which in this 8 court’s view heightens the danger recognized by the Congress and the Supreme Court in 9 203 North LaSalle Street Partnership that the plan will simply turn out to be too good a 10 deal for the debtor’s owners. Bank of America National Trust & Savings Assn. v. 203 11 North LaSalle Street Partnership, 526 U.S. at 444-445, citing H.R. Doc. No. 93-137, pt. I, 12 p.255.

13 As the court in Kamell points out regarding the argument that the narrow view 14 prohibits individual debtors from confirming a Chapter 11 plan, it does no such thing. In 15 re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 512. Creditor consent is the heart of Chapter 11, and individual 16 debtors can negotiate consensual plans in Chapter 11, which may not pay the claims of 17 unsecured creditors in full. As the court in Gbadebo pointed out, “such a plan may be 18 confirmed if the holders of such claims vote in favor of the plan.” 431 B.R. at 229. “They 19 are likely to do so if a reasonable dividend is proposed and they conclude that they will 20 receive no dividend in a chapter 7 case.” Id. at 229-230. Alternatively, individual Chapter 21 11 debtors can resort to cramdown if they satisfy the absolute priority rule as was the 22 case before the 2005 Bankruptcy Code amendments of BAPCPA by paying the claims of 23 ⁹ The court agrees with the court in Gbadebo and disagrees with the BAP in Friedman on this 24 point because under the broad view, individual debtors can and will approach creditor 25 negotiations with the premise that they can keep their prepetition property without having to 26 comply with the absolute priority rule as long as they meet the “best interests” test of 27 § 1129(a)(7)(i.e., distribute more than in a Chapter 7 liquidation case) and commit their projected 28 disposable income for no less than five years, no matter how minimal it may be, under § 1129(a)(15), thus, the reality is that the votes of a dissenting class of creditors can be ignored because debtors get to keep their prepetition property. Abrogation of the absolute priority rule would thus have the effect of altering the fundamental dynamic of the Chapter 11 process.

1 dissenting creditors in full. In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 512; see also In re Gbadebo, 431
2 B.R. at 229-230. In doing so, as recognized by the narrow view of § 1115, BAPCPA 3 provides a limited exception to the absolute priority rule by permitting cramdown under 4 § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) as amended by BAPCPA to allow individual debtors to keep their 5 postpetition earnings and postpetition assets without paying dissenting creditors in full as 6 otherwise required under the absolute priority rule. Retention of postpetition earnings 7 and property under a plan by an individual debtor does not violate the absolute priority 8 rule under the BAPCPA exception under amended § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii).

9 The argument for the broad view of § 1115 is that this would enable 10 manager/owners of businesses not eligible for Chapter 13 to reorganize their businesses 11 through Chapter 11. In re Roedemeier, 374 B.R. at 273-276; In re Shat, 424 B.R. at 862-12 865; In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 481-484. In other words, Congress must have intended 13 to make Chapter 11 for individuals more like Chapter 13. This interpretation is not 14 supported by the structure of the statutory language as discussed above, nor is it 15 supported in the legislative history of BAPCPA, which shows the purpose was to require 16 debtors to pay more. As the court observed in Karlovich, if Congress meant to provide 17 the protections of Chapter 13 to more debtors who are manager/owners of businesses, it 18 could have simply raised the debt limits of Chapter 13, which are currently set at 19 $360,475 for unsecured debts and $1,081,400 for secured debts. In re Karlovich, 456 20 B.R. at 682; 11 U.S.C. § 109(e). The absolute priority rule does not apply in Chapter 13 21 cases, and the debt limits of Chapter 13 serve to restrict reorganization without the 22 creditor protection of the absolute priority rule to debtors with limited debt levels.

23 The broad view removes the creditor protection of the absolute priority rule in 24 Chapter 11 cases as to individual debtors because there are no debt limits in Chapter 11.
25 Thus, the broad view would allow highly leveraged individuals who are not eligible for 26 Chapter 13 to qualify for Chapter 11 reorganization by allowing them to retain their 27 prepetition property without having to satisfy the absolute priority rule, no matter how 28 much debt they had incurred. In this court's view, this interpretation does violence to the

1 delicate balance between creditors and debtors in Chapter 11 and is not supported by the 2 structure and language of the Bankruptcy Code or the legislative history of the 2005
3 Code amendments in BAPCPA, and as the court in Kamell stated, “does unnecessary 4 violence to well-established jurisprudence.” See In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 511; see also 5 Florida Department of Revenue v. Piccadilly Cafeterias, Inc., 554 U.S. at 51, citing Toibb 6 v. Radloff, 501 U.S. at 163; In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 490-491 (Jury, J. dissenting) (“the 7 broad view taken by the Panel destroys the careful balance between an individual 8 chapter 11 debtor’s interest in reorganizing and restructuring his or her debts and the 9 creditor’s interest in maximizing the value of the bankruptcy estate”), citing Toibb v.
10 Radloff, 501 U.S. at 163. As the dissent in Friedman aptly observed, 11 Individual chapter 11 debtors are not simply chapter 13 debtors with 12 larger debts. Rather, chapter 11 debtors, individuals or not, stay in 13 possession of their property and enjoy all the rights and powers of a 14 trustee. They are authorized to operate their business and can choose to 15 extend their plan beyond five years. In exchange, the chapter 11 process 16 does not leave unsecured creditors by the wayside by affording individual 17 chapter 11 debtors the luxury to retain all pre and postpetition property at 18 their expense.

19 . . .

20 Individuals who own a business have the same opportunities as 21 corporate shareholders to take advantage of unsecured creditors.

22 In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 491 (Jury, J., dissenting); see also, 11 U.S.C. §§ 1106-1108, 23 1129, 1322 and 1325; see also, Bank of America National Trust & Savings Assn. v. 203
24 North LaSalle Street Partnership, 526 U.S. at 444-445.

25 Thus, the court agrees with other courts adopting the narrow view that if Congress 26 intended to make a “momentous change” in the law by eliminating the absolute priority 27 rule, a central principle of Chapter 11 reorganization theory and practice, for individual 28 Chapter 11 debtors, it would have merited at least a mention in the legislative history, which is silent on the issue. See, e.g., In re Gbadebo, 431 B.R. at 229-230; In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 509-512; In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904-905; see also, In re Shat, 424 B.R. at
at 66-86.

1 In this case, based on the Debtors' Schedules and the Amended Disclosure 2 Statement, the Debtors have over $4 million in unsecured debts and over $13 million in 3 secured debts, well in excess of the debt limits of Chapter 13 set forth in 11 U.S.C.
4 § 109(e), making them ineligible to file under that chapter. See In re Friedman, 466 B.R.
5 at 491 (Jury, J., dissenting). Without requiring the Plan to comply with the absolute 6 priority rule, the Debtors could write off about $3.5 million in unsecured debts, forcing 7 General Unsecured Creditors to take a loss of at least 85 cents on the dollar, while the 8 Debtors retain all prepetition and postpetition property, including an investment property 9 valued at $5,434,000 at a time that arguably may be the bottom of the real estate market.
10 Under the proposed Plan, the Debtors have unlimited upside potential for profit on their 11 prepetition and postpetition assets while U.S. Bank and other General Unsecured 12 Creditors must absorb the loss fixed under the proposed Plan. See In re Lively, __ B.R.
13 __, 2012 WL 959286, at *6 & nn.9-10 (example illustrating the problem of a windfall fixing 14 "projected disposable income" as the standard for payment of unsecured creditors in an 15 individual Chapter 11 plan). Under pre-BAPCPA law, the creditor protection of the 16 absolute priority rule would not have allowed this result. See, e.g., In re Perez, 30 F.3d at 17 1214.

18 Excepting financially sophisticated individual Chapter 11 debtors with complex 19 personal investments, as here, from the absolute priority rule and allowing them to retain 20 such investments despite their overleveraging does not seem justified in light of the 21 legislative history of BAPCPA and what Congress sought to accomplish in that act. This 22 situation in this case appears to be what Congress stated it intended to prevent with the 23 passage of BAPCPA.¹⁰ Unlike Chapter 13, which has debt limits on the amount of 24 _____

25 ¹⁰ The House Report made the following statement in this vein: "Second, there are significant 26 losses associated with bankruptcy rulings. As one witness explained during the Senate Judiciary 27 Committee's hearing on S. 256 earlier this year: 'Like all other business expenses, when creditors 28 are unable to collect debts because of bankruptcy, some of those losses are inevitably passed on to responsible Americans who live up to their financial obligations. Every phone bill, electric bill, mortgage, furniture purchase, medical bill, and car loan contains an implicit bankruptcy 'tax' that the rest of us pay to subsidize those who do not pay their bills. Exactly how much of these

1 secured and unsecured debt and attendant potential losses that are passed on to 2 creditors, the broad view results in potentially unlimited losses that are passed on to 3 unsecured creditors from the writing down of debt in cramdown plans of individual 4 Chapter 11 debtors.

5 A majority of the courts that have ruled on the issue of whether § 1115 should be 6 viewed narrowly or broadly have supported the narrow view holding that the absolute 7 priority rule applies in Chapter 11 bankruptcy cases of individual debtors. In re Gbadebo, 8 431 B.R. at 227-230; In re Mullins, 435 B.R. at 359-361; In re Gelin, 437 B.R. at 440-443; 9 In re Stephens, 445 B.R. at 820-821; In re Walsh, 447 B.R. at 49; In re Maharaj, 449 B.R.
10 at 491-494; In re Draiman, 450 B.R. at 820-822; In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 507-512; In re
11 Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 891-905; In re Karlovich, 456 B.R. at 679-682; In re Lively, ____ B.R.
12 ____, 2012 WL 959286, at *7; see also In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 484-492 (Jury, J., 13 dissenting). Only a minority of courts have adopted the broad view holding that the 14 absolute priority rule does not now apply in individual Chapter 11 bankruptcy cases. In re
15 Roedemeier, 374 B.R. at 273-276 & nn.15-19; In re Tegeder, 369 B.R. at 479-481 16 (Bankr. D. Neb. 2007); In re Shat, 424 B.R. at 862-868; SPCP Group, LLC v. Biggins, 17 465 B.R. at 320-324; In re Friedman, 466 B.R. at 480-484. The evolving majority in 18 support of the narrow view reinforces this court's conclusion that that Congress did not 19 abrogate the absolute priority rule for Chapter 11 cases of individual debtors in enacting 20 BAPCPA.

21 Thus, the structure and statutory language of the Bankruptcy Code, the legislative 22 history of BAPCPA, strong policy considerations, and the weight of the case law, in 23

24 bankruptcy losses is passed on from lenders to consumer borrowers is unclear, but economics 25 tells us that at least some of it is. We all pay for bankruptcy abuse in higher down payments, 26 higher interest rates, and higher costs for goods and services." H.R. Rep. No. 109-31, part 1, at 27 3-5, 2005 WL 832198, at *2-3, quoted in In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904. In light of such 28 legislative statements, the court does not agree that Congress intended to abrogate the creditor protection of the absolute priority rule to allow individual debtors to rid themselves of burdensome prepetition debt while being able to retain their prepetition assets. See, e.g., In re Gbadebo, 431
B.R. at 229-230; In re Kamell, 451 B.R. at 509-512; In re Lindsey, 453 B.R. at 904-905.

1 support of the narrow interpretation of § 1115 lead this court to conclude that the absolute 2 priority rule still applies in Chapter 11 cases of individual debtors as to prepetition 3 property of the bankruptcy estate covered under § 541.

4 C. The Debtors' Plan Violates the Absolute Priority Rule

5 Under the narrow view of § 1115, which this court adopts, prepetition property is 6 unaffected by § 1115 for purposes of § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii) and may not be retained unless 7 senior classes of claims are paid in full or unless all senior classes vote to accept the 8 proposed Plan. The Debtors, however, have retained their interests in their prepetition 9 assets without paying senior creditors in full under the proposed Plan. Specifically, the 10 Debtors have left their interests unimpaired and propose that all property (prepetition and 11 postposition) will revest in a revocable trust controlled by the Debtors after plan 12 confirmation. This proposition is impermissible given that the conditions in 13 § 1129(b)(2)(B) are not satisfied, and the court will therefore deny approval of the 14 Amended Disclosure Statement.

15 CONCLUSION

16 The court finds that the Amended Disclosure Statement cannot be approved 17 because it contains inadequate information and because it describes a plan that may not 18 confirmed. Accordingly, approval of the Amended Disclosure Statement must be 19 DENIED. A separate order is being filed concurrently herewith
